'Red Power' Gears Up For Huge Tractor Convention

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — "Red Power" is gearing up for what organizers call a massive three-day event at Bloomsburg Fairgrounds. June 26-28, may seem like a long time away, but for Ben Trapani and Frank Bartlow, the work for the International Harvester (IH) Roundup is moving full speed ahead.

"IH stuff is coming from the four corners of the U.S.," Trapani said.

He expects that proud IH collectors will bring more than 1,000 red tractors to show off.

It doesn't matter that tractors are no longer manufactured under the IH name. The fierce competitiveness between devotees of different colored tractors is intense.

Strong emotions persist for followers of each brand of tractors.

"Red Power" perspective claims that red tractors were far advanced over other colored brands.

"Between 1939-1953, more than 400,000 Farmall H and 300,000 Farmall M models were sold compared to only 1,000 models sold by their nearest competitor." Trapani said.

Case IH has roots from 1831, when Cyrus McCormick invent-

International and Farmall pedal tractors comprise some of the collection by Ben Trapani. A tour of a museum with plenty of "Red Power" is scheduled during the 2003 Roundup, hosted by the International Harvester Collectors of Central Pennsylvania Chapter 17 on June 26-28 at the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds.

COOL — Hot Topic At Cattle Feeder's Day

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "COOL" was the hot topic at the Cattle Feeder's Day Tuesday at the Farm and Home Center.

"What Is Country of Origin Labeling (COOL)?" was scheduled as the last topic on program and it turned out to be the highlight of the day.

Program planners had requested a representative from the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) to speak on COOL and its relationship to mandatory livestock identification and how it will affect cattle feeders in Pennsylvania. AMS is responsible for implementing the program mandated by the 2002 Farm Bill.

From the outset, (probably knowing what he was in for), William T. Sessions, associate deputy administrator, Livestock and Seed Program, USDA/AMS, announced that he was "just the messenger" and that his department will implement with full intent the Country of Origin Labeling for the covered commodities sold by retailers with an annual invoice of over $250,000.

The covered commodities, Sessions noted, are beef (includes veal), pork, lamb, fish, fresh or frozen fruits and vegetables, and peanuts. Excluded from the program are food service establishments, butcher shops, fish mar-

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Livestock handling expert Dr. Temple Grandin presented her thoughts about farm animal welfare during a conference this week in Grantville.

The conference was sponsored by the PennAg Industries Association and Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council, and drew 250 people.

The two groups conducted the Animal Handling/Welfare Conference and Keystone Pork Expo and Trade Show Tuesday at the Holiday Inn.

Besides several presenters, the conference featured a youth Pork Bowl and speaking contests.

"Animals and people are in a symbiotic relationship," explained Christine Kellett, director of the Penn State/Dickinson Agricultural Law Research and Education Center, Carlisle.

"Because of this symbiotic relationship, good care returns itself in profit," said Kellett.

"We are not the voting power

National Turkey Market At A Glance
Des Moines, Iowa
February 5, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

DOMESTIC MARKET HIGHLIGHTS: The undertone on frozen hens and consumer sized toms was mostly steady. Inquiry light as processors continued to make proposals for the November holiday. Trading slow for current shipments with some buyers reluctant to buy at present price levels. Offerings adequate. The bulk white meat market was steady at best with some increased confidence noted due in part to the increased activity on tom breast meat for deferred shipments and a less willingness to discount. Bulk meat trading centered on a heavy volume of open priced fresh tom breast meat for current through May shipments. A heavy volume of 4-8 lb breasts traded for current shipments, balance of items light.

EXPORT MARKET HIGHLIGHTS: Demand and trading ranged from light to instances fair with activity centered on tom full-cut wings and thigh meat. Inquiry was noted from Mexico and Asia. Some concern was noted about Mexico pertaining to the implementation of the new inspection procedures at the border.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

FEBRUARY 10–16, 2003

ST. VALENTINE, FEB. 14

NAME THAT PHASE

Historically, Native Americans kept track of the seasons by giving a distinctive name to full Moons that occurred during important periods of the year The Algonquin tribes from New England to Lake Superior called the second full Moon of the year the Full Snow Moon (occuring on February 16 this year) because usually the heaviest snows fall during February Hunting at this time was difficult, so Native Americans also called this the Full Hunger Moon

In all things of nature there is something of the marvelous. –Anstotle Greek philosopher (384–322 B.C.)

OPINION

Pollution Solution: Use A Mulching Mower

Each year, Pennsylvania residents help deposit 25 million tons of trash in landfills. That equates to about 1 ton per person per year, according to estimates provided by Rep. Tom Creighton (R-37), who spoke last week during the Lancaster County Extension annual meeting.

Twenty percent of that trash is organic waste, which includes grass clippings and leaves.

Lancaster County was given a special citation from the state legislators because of its efforts to teach composting to households, with a potential savings of about five million tons or 200 pounds per person. That's significant!

What's more significant and downright surprising is that so many people still bag leaves and grass, when a simple solution, and one that has worked for this editor for the past 13 years, involves mulching.

I've used a mulch mower during that time. I have never bagged grass or leaves. For more than a decade I have been using a 20-inch mulching mower in a property with about 10 trees measuring about a third of an acre. I could easily do an acre or more, add more trees, and still not have to bag or pack a thing.

The myth: so many leaves. I have mulched every organic component, in addition to leaves (from various maples and Bradford pear trees), even the vegetables from my garden. It works completely. I've been doing it successfully for 13 years! And my lawn looks fine!

There is no reason every yard manager couldn't use a simple mulching mower. For the past 13 years, I have mulched it all, including the leaves and small branches from the trees into the lawn. The mulch feeds the lawn and recycles the nutrients.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has a plan in place to reduce organic waste by 35 percent. Let's reduce it by at least 80 percent by using mulching systems whenever possible.

National Food Check Out Day, Feb. 6, is a celebration of the bounty coming from U.S. farms and ranches.

American consumers share the bounty by affordable food prices. The average U.S. citizen devotes only 10 percent of their income to pay for food and they earn this amount in just 37 days. Compared to other expenses facing American families, food is a great bargain. It takes an average of 123 days of work to pay local, state, and federal taxes.

The Indiana County Farm Bureau, its members and their churches, have teamed up to take the opportunity to share our good fortune by collecting food, cash donations, and other items for the Ronald McDonald House in Pittsburgh. There are five Ronald McDonald houses across the state that provide a "home-away-from-home" for the families of seriously ill children receiving medical treatment. The other 53 county Farm Bureaus also participate in providing for the needs of their local Ronald McDonald houses.

The farmers of Indiana County and Pennsylvania sincerely thank each of you who buy locally grown and produced commodities. We ask for your continued support.

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Prepare For Lambing

Lancaster county livestock agent Chester Hughes provides this timely advice as lambing season is near.

Ewes showing signs of approaching lambing (nervousness, anxiety, bleating, and pawing) should be moved into lambing pens. If fluid is discharged and labor is unproductive, give assistance. Use a mild detergent solution to clean your hands and the external area around the vulva before examining the ewe.

Lambs that cannot be delivered normally can still be saved by caesarean section if the operation is performed while they are still alive. Be sure the new lamb is breathing properly. Clear its nostrils of mucous by holding it by the hind legs and rubbing it. Some shepherds insert a straw stem in the nostril gently to force the lamb to sneeze. Lambs, which won't breathe, can be held by the head and dipped in cold water to make them gasp for their first breath. Dry lambs off as soon as possible after birth. Rubbing them dry is preferable. Heat lamps should only be used with weak lambs.

Baby lambs should nurse as soon as possible. The first milk (colostrum) supplies antibodies against many diseases. After the lamb is 15 minutes old, his ability to absorb antibodies rapidly decreases. By the time the lamb is eight hours old, he can only absorb about half the amount of antibodies, and none by 36 hours.

Baby lambs born in cold weather and deprived of colostrum for even a short time quickly suffer from loss of blood glucose (dextrose). Many are given up as lost when simple treatment will usually save them. Keep a supply of 50 percent dextrose solution on hand. If the lamb can swallow a tablespoonful of this solution, it will usually quickly revive. If the lamb is too weak to swallow, use a stomach tube to administer 5 to 10 percent sterile dextrose-saline solution.

To Attend The Lancaster County Crop Production Day

A number of important and interesting topics are on the agenda for Lancaster County's Crop Production Day on Feb. 14 at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster.

Reduced tillage systems often increase the challenge of management of crop pests. Regional agronomy agent Mark Goodson will discuss how to avoid the notorious pests that invade under reduced tillage. Farm Service Agency Staff will review how the Farm Bill affects both program and nonprogram farms. Capitol region agronomy agent Paul Craig will discuss developing good pesticide handling habits. You will learn how to practice some simple safety habits that could prevent future illness or emergencies room visits. Craig will also review some simple ways to stay safe while working with pesticides.

Capitol region agronomy agent John Rowehl will present "Customizing Your Cropping Plans for Profitability." You will get a better understanding of how some key planning activities can increase yields and minimize production risks on drought-prone soils.

After lunch, Capitol region agronomy agent Del Voight will discuss "What's in your Bank?" Weed seeds remain viable for many years, and an understanding of which seeds are contained in the soil is paramount to good weed management.

With recent scares and terrorist's activities, there are major concerns facing pesticide users and the agricultural community. Lancaster County agronomy agent Bob Anderson will discuss "Pesticide Agrosecurity For the Farmstead."

With recent droughts and low commodity prices, crop insurance is more important than ever to reduce production and income risks. Gene Gantz, with the USDA Risk Management Agency, will provide a "Crop Insurance Update." You will learn how producers with insurance made out this past growing season.

The meeting begins at 9 a.m. For more information, call the Lancaster County Extension Office at (717)-394-6851.

Quote of the Week:

"I return to farming with an ardour which I scarcely knew in my youth, and which has got the better entirely of my love of study. Instead of writing ten or twelve letters a day, which I have been in the habit of doing as a thing of course, I put off answering my letters now, farmer-like, till a rainy day, and then find it sometimes postponed by other necessary occupations."

— Thomas Jefferson in a letter to John Adams, April 25, 1794

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

UNDER NEW ORDERS

Background Scripture:
Acts 25:23 through 26:32.
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 3:1-13.

Is it possible for us to be followers of Jesus without ever having experienced a life transforming experience? Some of us can tell dramatic stories of Jesus coming into our lives and curing us of alcoholism, drugs, and so forth. But many of us sincerely believe we live lives from which we do not need to be converted.

I believe transformation is essential, but it is something that is so varied that one style does not fit all. It may be subtle and externally unobserved. Dramatic changes are easy to observe, but inner growth may not be. Although it sometimes may be visible, it is not so much about external appearances, but inner focus.

When Paul stood before King Agrippa, he sought to explain what had transformed him from Saul the persecutor of the Way to Paul the apostle for Christ. He began his journey on the Damascus Road "with the authority and commission of the chief priests" to seek out and persecute the followers of Jesus, but his experience gave him new orders.

The Same, But Different

How dramatic was Paul's change? There was a dramatic change, but it did not mean the complete annihilation of the old Saul. He was still a single-minded and zealous man who poured himself unreservedly into his spiritual missions, still a man whose personality, if he were a clergyman today, would make him a hard to place in a local church. What transformed his life was a new focus.

So it is, too, with most of us. What we need is not to become totally different, but totally focused on following Christ. An alcoholic's life is focused on his or her next drink. A gambler's life is focused on the next bet. A Christian's life, however, needs to be focused on the next step in discipleship.

We do not have to become like Paul or Mary Magdalene. But, like them, we are called to focus our lives on Jesus.

Before King Agrippa, Paul didn't use the term "focus," but he did speak of the old commission which he gave up for a new one. The old one was the "authority and commission of the chief priests" in Jerusalem. The new commission, however, came from the risen Lord: "... to appoint you to serve and bear witness to the things in which you have seen me... delivering you from the people and from the Gentiles — to whom I send you" (26:16). Paul is under new orders!

Transformed To Transform

Those new orders are spelled out carefully: "... the Gentiles... that you may open their eyes, that they may turn from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins and a place among those who are sanctified by faith in me" (26:17,18). So his life is transformed and placed under new orders so that others may be also be transformed and under new orders.

The call that came to Paul is the very same call that comes to each of us on whatever road we are traveling. The ways in which we can respond will be different from the ways in which Paul responded. The circumstances today are different from those in their world. Our own individual lives are certainly different. But the call to open the eyes of others to the light of Jesus Christ has never changed and never will.

Forty years ago, I wrote on a small card these words: "I am not called to be 'successful' in my ministry, but obedient — for that will be 'success' enough.'"

Aware that I, like Paul, was under new orders, I have kept those words upon my desk and in my consciousness ever since. Paul did not measure his response in numbers or public acclaim. His only measure was obedience: "Wherefore, O King Agrippa, I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision...." That is the only criteria with which to measure our response: have we been obedient to it?

"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

Don't Judge Corn Rootworm Protection by Root Ratings Alone

Root ratings are generally the criteria by which soil insecticides are compared. While they do provide an indication of how well an insecticide protects roots from rootworm feeding, choosing the insecticide with the best rating doesn't mean you're going to turn a profit

The fact is, all leading insecticides under normal rootworm pressure protect roots at levels below thresholds of economic damage The real measurement is return on investment

Purdue University trials[1] conducted since 1991 show that while some insecticides may have slightly better root ratings, Lorsban* 15G insecticide offers the highest yields and best return on investment

Lorsban 15G returns an average of 10 8 bushels more corn per acre than untreated plots, resulting in a profit of $5 28 per acre The only other insecticide to return a profit is Force 3G insecticide at just 2 cents per acre

In fact, Counter 20CR, Regent 4SC, Fortress 5G and Aztec 2 1G insecticides each showed a negative return, with Aztec losing $5 78 per acre

Here are a few other facts about Lorsban 15G

- Lorsban 15G also controls all species of cutworms, grubs, seed corn maggots, wireworm and other pests
- The fungicidal activity found only in Lorsban 15G promotes seedling health that protects seedlings from soilborne fungi that can limit early root development and lead to stalk rot
- Lorsban 15G is compatible with all commonly used herbicides, including Callisto.
- Lorsban 15G is the only non-restricted use corn insecticide and carries a CAUTION warning - the lowest human hazard signal word and best handling profile of any insecticide

To learn more about the benefits of Lorsban 15G, contact your local ag retailer

Feb. 4, 2003
U.S. ECONOMY SLOWING DOWN

- GDP weak in fourth quarter.
- Dairy futures reacting.
- Dairy consumption strong?

The U.S. Department of Commerce announced last week that real Gross Domestic Product, or GDP, grew just 0.7 percent in the last (fourth) quarter of 2002. That is down from a growth rate of 4 percent in the prior quarter.

The U.S. economy slowed significantly during the important holiday shopping season. This may explain some of the buildup in dairy commodity inventories that occurred at the end of 2002.

The economy is operating in a very weak environment right now. The question is, will it rebound in 2003? This will be required in order to spur on more dairy consumption.

The dairy futures market at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) continues to react to this bad news. As of Jan. 31, 2003, the annual average of Class III CME offerings was just $11.04 per CWT, down $0.95 per CWT from Dec. 2, 2002. In other words, if a producer on Dec. 2, 2002 locked in 100 percent of their future milk production for every month in 2003 using the Class III futures, they would have been $0.95 per CWT ahead of what the CME is offering today.

I advised in this column last December to consider the CME when prices were close to the five-year average.

The weaker outlook at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange is probably because of a combination of two things. First, the milk supply has not yet slowed down sufficiently to clear the market. Second, demand for dairy products is still weak. Imports could be a third reason, but in my opinion, net trade (imports less exports) has not yet been adequately quantified to the marketplace in terms of its impact on U.S. supply and demand.

For example, we import MPCs, then dump (I mean DEIP) nonfat dry milk on to the international market. What is the net effect of this on domestic cheese production?

USDA released another set of mysterious numbers for supply and demand for the first 11 months of 2002. According to the latest numbers, milk marketings were up 2.7 percent in 2002. However, this was offset by consumption in butter (^{2}.5 percent), American cheese (^{1}.4 percent), other cheese (^{3}.3 percent), nonfat dry milk (–22.0 percent), and fluid milk products (^{0}.3 percent).

Numbers for the period September through November look even better! Butter consumption for this three-month period was up 8.4 percent, and total cheese consumption was up 4.1 percent. These numbers, however, don't jibe with the inventory numbers, or at least I don't think they do. Much more needs to be explained.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
February 5, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids were slightly higher, today, supported by export optimism and continued concerns over winter wheat conditions. Indications that Egypt may be in the market for US wheat gave firmness to bids. Corn bids were narrowly mixed, but mostly lower as lack export sales remain disappointing. Soybean bids lost most of yesterday's advances due to light fund selling on the Board. Forecasts for wet weather in Argentina and Southern Brazil weakened trade. Light export purchase by South Korea overnight was positive. Wheat steady to 3 cents higher. Corn mixed, mostly 1 cent lower except Omaha steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 2 to 3 cents lower. Soybeans 7 to 8 cents lower.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
February 5, 2003
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.2219-1.3600. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.2538-1.3600 mostly 1.2644-1.2963.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9200-.9800; Class III - spot prices - .7200-.8600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week: In 0, Out 15; last week: In 0, Out 0; last year: In 6, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week: In 0, Out 0; last week: In 0, Out 0; last year: In 0, Out 0.

The following are the January 2003 Class and component prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $11.29 (down $0.33 from December), Class III $9.78 (up $0.04); and Class IV $10.07 (down $0.42). The following are the product price averages used in computing Class prices: butter $1.0872, NDM $0.8207, cheese $1.1307, and dry whey $0.1728. The Class II butterfat price is $1.1926 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $1.1856.

Milk production is steady to slightly heavier in most of the East. In the Northeast, the milk flow is mostly steady and milk supplies are moderate to heavy. In the Southeast, milk output is increasing along the coastal areas from the Carolinas to Louisiana. Elsewhere in the South, milk production is generally steady. Florida's need for milk eased this week as in-state milk production is increasing and demand is steady. Therefore, handlers had to ship milk out of state for processing, a trend that may continue if historic patterns are any indication. Bottled milk sales ranged from slower in the South to good in the Northeast. Another storm and cold temperatures "blew through" the Mid-South, Middle Atlantic, and New England, which caused a short flurry of panic buying at some grocery stores. Bottlers reported good orders during the weekend, but slightly slower orders at midweek. Surplus milk volumes are moderate to heavy. Some cheese plants are down this week and the extra milk was looking for a home. Southeastern balancing plants ran some additional milk this week as a result of slower Class I sales and the milk coming out of Florida. This additional surplus milk supply was, in some instances, eased by one organization's need for extra milk to meet manufacturing commitments. Eastern butter/powder plants are busy, but most are not yet at capacity.

The condensed skim market is mostly steady and prices range from steady to lower now that February milk prices are impacting Class II transactions. Demand for wet solids is steady at best. Some users are looking at NDM as a less expensive alternative.

The fluid cream market is weak and prices are lower. Supplies are excessive and most producers and/or handlers continue to clear a large portion of their cream to butter producers. Reportedly, cream shipments from the East to Upper Midwest butter makers are heavy and have been since early January. Spot interest for Class II cream is slow to fair. Some buyers are taking advantage of the low prices to make some spot purchases. Some suppliers did drop their multiples to attract more Class II interest, particularly since most butter makers have significantly reduced their paying multiples. Cream cheese production is steady to slightly higher as some producers did take on some spot loads this week. Ice cream output is steady, but here too, producers are often able to purchase attractively priced spot loads. Bottled cream output is light. Churning activity is heavy.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
January 31, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER SUMMARY for week ending Jan. 31 — Total Receipts: 319,700, last week 463,400. Direct 57,500, last week 48,100. Video/Internet 800, last week 124,100. Auctions 261,400, last week 291,200. This week's reported auction volume included 51 percent over 600 lbs and 43 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers weighing over 700 lbs sold steady to 1.00 lower. Stocker cattle traded steady to 2.00 higher with many Southeastern calves selling as much as 4.00 higher than last week. Receipts were much lighter this week, especially across Dixieland, and buyers are starting to assemble thin and lightweight calves for spring turn-out.

Yearling demand was only moderate, again this week, despite higher futures and a rebounding finished market that was able to get back to 80.00. The problem with the market for feedlot replacements is that the CME Live Cattle Futures for June are trading at more than a 10.00 discount to spot February, August is trading at more than a 13.00 discount. Normally, cattle feeders would run over one another to purchase 7 weight feeders for the same price as their closeouts. But, the handwriting is on the wall for a major slaughter cattle market-collapse and feeder buyers are using restraint to keep replacements at a reasonably hedgeable level.

Most feedlots are expecting 81.00 for next week's showlists and it's hard to believe that today's feeders will only be worth around 70.00 in just 120 days, especially as "green" cattle are frantically being pulled forward.

This week the USDA announced the resurrection of voluntary slaughter cattle price reporting. Market reporters will once again be hitting the phones to stay in contact with countless feedyards, trying to get a handle on the latest in the trading arena. The report will initially cover the Texas and Nebraska feedlot areas, with Kansas, Colorado, and Iowa to follow.

Friday's cattle inventory report pegged total numbers at 96.1 million head on January 1, this marks the seventh consecutive year of herd reduction. The number of beef cow operations also fell by 1 percent.

Cattle people were reminded of this industry's humble beginnings this week as one of the largest remaining parcels of the old XIT Ranch was placed on the auction block. The original 3 million acre ranch in Texas was awarded in 1879 to a group of investors in exchange for a new Capitol building in Austin.

'Red Power' Gears Up For Huge Tractor Convention

ed the reaper. The company built trucks, bulldozers, construction equipment, refrigeration, milking equipment — "everything a man in a rural area needed to farm," Trapani said.

At one time, IH was named the eighth largest business in the U. S. The company had lumber, steel, and coal mining operations that enabled them to process every tractor and equipment piece from start to finish. For instance, the forges were run with coal to form the steel.

Despite "Red Power's" popularity and size, the company went out of business in 1985.

"Not because they didn't have customers. It was sort of an 'Enron' thing," Trapani said of financial mismanagement.

Some of the company's branches were sold to other companies. Part of the company continued manufacturing trucks, which today are sold under the International name. The tractor division was sold to Case IH, which had been making orange tractors. Case IH changed their color to red.

"The color is half the secret (to success). It's all about that beautiful red paint. There's nothing like a red tractor," Trapani said.

Cub Cadet, which focuses on lawn and garden equipment, eventually assumed Case IH's tractor line.

Trapani, who sells outdoor power equipment, says the little dealers were pushed out because only big operations are desired by tractor companies.

The demise of the International Harvester company certainly does not deter its devotees.

International Harvester Collector Chapter 17 President Ben Trapani rides his 1952 Farmall H at a recent event.

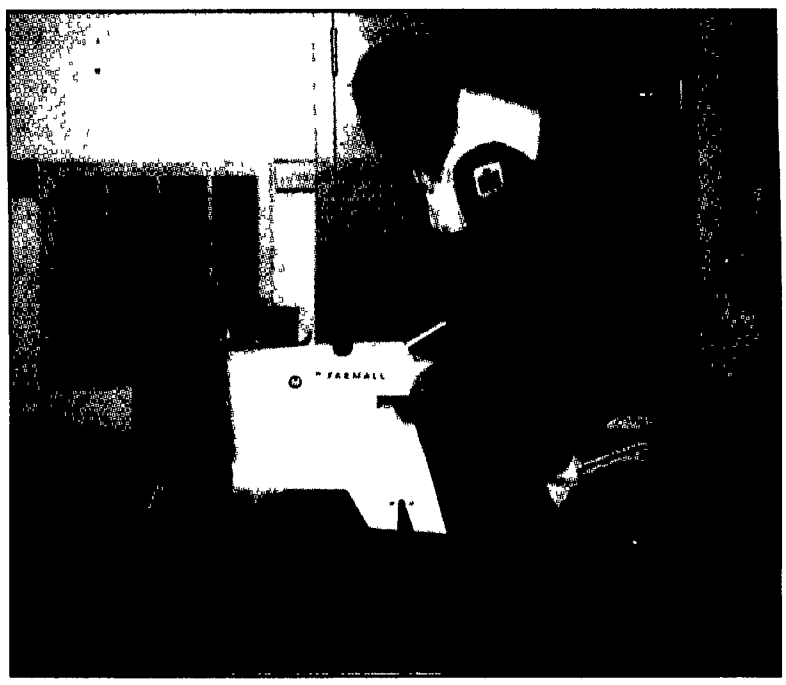
"People like to come (to the shows) and see all the equipment, especially that odd piece they never saw before." Trapani said.

Tractors and equipment varied from area to area. The South had high crop tractors to harvest cotton and the tractors used LP gas. Because of huge acreage to be farmed, the West had larger tractors than Pennsylvania. In addition to the known models, some strange-looking pieces continue to show up at shows — odd pieces that were put together to meet a particular need.

"Just one more piece," say collectors such as Trapani, who look for anything connected to the IH company. In addition to tractors and farm machinery, Trapani collects toys, a whole series of pedal tractors, memorabilia, hats, old clothing, "no matter what — even greased-stained mechanics clothing," he said.

Trapani has collected tractor models included the 1937 F12, 1931 1020, 1937 F20, IH 1947, 1951 Farmall M and H models, and a 1954 IH400. He figures it takes about a year, working about 10-15 hours a week, to tear a tractor apart, fix it, paint it, and put it back together.

Trapani is president of International Harvester Collectors of Central Pennsylvania Chapter 17. Members share their enthusiasm for red tractors and related memorabilia. The club's origin has roots to the early 1990s, when two Indiana men, a former IH dealer and a farmer, started the first IH Club. Today there are 32 chapters in the U.S., Canada, and Sweden. The clubs conduct semi-annual shows at different sites throughout the U.S.



Frank "Tubby" Bartlow on a peddle tractor. IH aficionados worldwide can visit the museum and participate in a great many events June 26-28 at the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds.

Pennsylvania has three Red Power clubs with more than 500 members.

In addition to admiring the tractors and equipment, one of the focuses of the club is to offer expertise in restoring old tractors and equipment to its original showroom condition.

"But some guys like the stuff just the way they found it — rusty," Trapani said.

Club membership costs only $10 annually. Members meet monthly and also publish a newsletter.

Trapani and Bartlow are members of Chapter 17 in charge of hosting the convention.

They selected the Bloomsburg Fairgrounds as the site because it is the largest in the state, according to Trapani.

"You don't need to be a club member to attend the convention or to display things," Trapani said.

Neither do you need to preregister, although it will save time if you do.

For general information about the show, call Trapani at (570) 275-0398. For tractor pull information, call Brian Shively at (570) 922-4841. For vendor space, call Marvin Walter, (570) 837-3386. For memorabilia displays, call Helen Barto at (570) 547-0851.

Outstanding Growers, Marketers Take Banquet Center Stage

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Several awards were presented to outstanding growers by an array of fruit and vegetable organizations Tuesday evening here at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention.

Dave Benner, along with wife Pam and family, gathered on the podium to celebrate the honor of being named the state's outstanding growers by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania (SHAP).

The Benners operate El Vista Orchards, Fairfield. The Benners manage 700 acres of fruit trees, including 400 acres of apples and 100 acres of peaches, plums, and sweet cherries. They operate nine different farms with 11 full-time and 85-90 seasonal employees.

Dave is called by some the "answer man," who can provide information for growers on a variety of topics.

Benner, on accepting the awards, noted that, "without a doubt, this is a breathtaking experience," and thanked everybody, including state agricultural colleges and universities for their input.

Benner maintains a close association with the state's apple marketing board and is active on several commodity boards and organizations.

At the banquet at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center Tuesday evening, about 200 growers and industry representatives were on hand to recognize many other individuals.

John Mason, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, spoke about how the industry was "blessed" in the past six years by an individual who helped create and implement the Simple Delicious Pennsylvania Produce marketing program. Recognized for his work, "personal energy, time and interest," Mason noted, was former Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes.

Mason noted how Hayes also helped get crop insurance on the must-do list for many producers. When Hayes began, one in 20 producers were signed up. Now, half of the state's growers are signed up. "I don't know why we're not at 100 percent," Mason

Protect Wheat Now from Threat of Winter Annuals

Wheat growers battling increased winter annual broadleaf pressure should turn to DuPont™ Harmony® Extra wheat herbicide to help boost wheat yields, crop quality and their bottom line return on investments this season.

• Known for its excellent effectiveness on wild garlic, Harmony® Extra also provides outstanding control of more than 50 broadleaf weeds, including henbit and common chickweed. This broad-spectrum weed control is especially advantageous, as area wheat growers have reported increased winter annual broadleaf pressure in their stands.

According to growers and weed specialists, winter annuals, including henbit and common chickweed, have been on the increase in wheat for the past several years. Reasons include the move to seed-herbicide systems such as Roundup Ready soybeans that do not rely on residual herbicides. Other factors include an increase in no-till acreage, and warm late-fall weather patterns.

This increase in winter annuals can cause trouble for wheat growers. University studies show that henbit and common chickweed can reduce potential wheat yields by up to 20 percent.[1]

Gene and William Boswell, Lewisport, Ky., can attest to the value of using Harmony® Extra. The brothers have relied on the product for more than 15 years. They also depended on Harmony® Extra to help them earn first place in the 2001 University of Kentucky Wheat Production Contest in the no-till category with a high-end yield of 106 bushels per acre.

"We used to lose money every season due to wild garlic dockage, but we haven't lost a cent at the elevator since Harmony® Extra came along," Gene Boswell explained. "It also does such an outstanding job on winter annuals that we don't worry about losing yield to henbit and common chickweed anymore, either."

Harmony® Extra offers other advantages, such as a wide application window, complete rotation flexibility—including double-crop soybeans—and cleaner fields for the following crop.

For more information about Harmony® Extra, contact your local DuPont retailer or DuPont representative.

New England Farmers' Direct Marketing Conference March 12-13

BOXBOROUGH, Mass. — "Change, Challenge, and Collaboration" is the theme of the 2003 New England Farmers' Direct Marketing Conference, here March 12-13 at the Holiday Inn Boxborough Woods.

The conference will help conference attendees embrace change, overcome challenges, and succeed through collaboration with their fellow farm direct marketers and others not in the industry.

Two featured speakers, Pete Luckett and Jim Cain, will each give a full-day workshop on March 12. Luckett is also the keynote speaker on March 13. Cain will speak during the day's closing session.

Luckett, Bedford, Nova Scotia, is known to many people as "The Food Hunger" because of his popular TV show on "The Food Network." He owns Pete's Frootique, an 18,000-square-foot market that features towering displays of produce and innovative merchandising techniques.

From Don the Doorman to Steve the pianist, shoppers are never bored when shopping at Pete's Frootique. Luckett is one of Canada's leading independent green grocers. His workshop is titled "Creating the Wow—Every Day!" Attendees will leave with ideas on how to create unforgettable consumer experiences at their farms via innovative branding, team building, effective displays, power merchandising, and customer service. They'll learn how their farms can out-wow the chain stores.

Cain, of Brockport, N.Y., has taught adventure-based teambuilding for more than 25 years. His workshop, "A day of teamwork and teamplay," will probably change the lives of all who attend. He'll help attendees transform their employee hiring and training practices, build a "working community" with their staffs, and collaborate successfully with others in the community.

The workshops are $85 per person if preregistered by March 3. Late or on-site registration will be $100. Conference registration is $75 ($95 if late or on-site). Registration includes the full day of the conference on March 13, coffee hour, lunch, an evening social, and the conference advisory group meeting.

For registration information, call (413) 529-9100, e-mail info@massfarmstands.com, or visit www.newenglandconference.com.

Conference sessions are "Step 1: Collaborating With Those Who Sell New England," "Step 2: Selling Your Farm By Selling New England," "What Flew And What Flopped," and "Understanding The Media: A Panel Discussion." The day will conclude with Jim Cain's general session, "Collaboration, Competition, Change, and the Future."

The conference is organized by White Loaf Ridge Management and is the official conference of the Massachusetts Association of Roadside Stands and Pick-Your-Own. This year, it collaborated with the Northeast Farm Communicators Association (NEFC). Members of NEFC will participate during the media panel discussion. It is also offering a special session called "Interviewing: What to say when the media calls." It's a chance for farmers to network with the agricultural media, and it's a chance for them to practice their interviewing skills. The session will be led by B.J. Roche, of Charlemont, Mass. She teaches newswriting and reporting at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. She's also a freelance writer and newsletter editor and is a regular writer for the Boston Globe Sunday Magazine.

said, especially since the state pays the catastrophic coverage.

Hayes also assisted in times of trouble, especially regarding plum pox virus, the droughts, biosecurity issues, Farm Show renovation, and the building of the brand-new Livestock Evaluation Center near Rockspring.

Pennsylvania produce is "simply delicious," Hayes told the growers. "They're that way in large measure because you are simply wonderful."

Mason also recognized Warren Mathius, Hayes' executive assistant.

At the banquet, John Lott, president of the National Peach Council (NPC), recognized Roger Wood, Atwater, Calif., with the National Peach Council Achievement Award.

Wood was recognized for his "vision" toward promoting peaches and peach issues to legislators in Washington, D.C. According to Lott, Wood "believes that every peach that is marketed is a good thing — it doesn't matter where it's from."

Wood, director of government affairs with NPC, helps manage the JR Wood Co. family farm, which includes 1,700 acres of peaches, 200 acres of seedless grapes, 100 acres of apricots, and 2,000 head of feeder cattle. They freeze 150 million pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables every year.

Billy Brent, Brent's Orchard, Fairfield, was honored by SHAP with the state Farm Show Best Bushel of Apples and Farm Market Award.

The 2003 Farm Show Best Roadside Market Award was presented to the Mickey family of Shatzer Fruit Market. They included Wilma, Dwight, and Jack Mickey.

More convention coverage is scheduled in Lancaster Farming's Grower & Marketer section March 8.

Workshop To Provide Farm Start-Up Strategies

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.)— With less than 2 percent of Americans calling themselves farmers and many of those earning more than half of their income off the farm, beginners ask, " How can I get into farming in the current farm economy? What does it take?"

Pennsylvania Farm Link's Beginning Farmer workshop— March 1, will emphasize that a successful farm start-up is not dependent on age, size, type of farm operation, or previous career selection. Instead, success relies more on negotiating a good fit between your personal and financial resources, your farm and family goals, and the way you decide to enter farming.

Keynote speaker, Dan Looker, Business Editor of Successful Farming magazine, will explore how beginners from all over the country got started in farming. His book, Farmers for the Future, breaks through the myth that you have to inherit a farm to get started in agriculture. At the same time, he understands why getting started is so difficult and encourages young people and older farmers to ask hard questions before entering into employment or partnership agreements. Looker will provide insight for new farmers on what other beginning farmers used to be successful.

The workshop embraces real-world discussion with Pennsylvania's innovative beginning farmers from a variety of backgrounds and enterprises. Hear from those taking the reins from other family members, taking over a non-family operation, part-time farming, or starting on their own from scratch. Types of farmers represented are: dairy, hog, poultry, livestock, fruit and vegetables, specialty enterprises, cooperative members, direct marketers, and wholesalers.

Though young, many of these farmers are recognized as industry leaders. Ranging in diversity from aquaculture to vegetables, what is common to the group is their commitment and enthusiasm for farming. They employ a diversity of marketing strategies including direct, wholesale, roadside marketing, and value-added options. Going beyond start-up strategies, these beginners will tell you how they are juggling farm and family pressures, ways to measure success, and how apprentice programs are helping them gain a foothold in the industry.

Beyond inspiration, participants will receive practical knowledge and advice on how to select an enterprise that's right for you, how to convince your banker you have what it takes, and how to scout out the market and developing a business plan.

The workshop will be conducted Saturday, March 1 at the Holiday Inn in Grantville, PA from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The cost of the workshop is $35 for an individual, $55 for a couple and $25 for a student. Early Bird registrations received by 2/19/03 may deduct $5 per category. Registrations are required by February 26, 2003 and include lunch. Contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at 717-664-7077 or email us at pafarmlink@redrose.net for more information and a brochure.

Temple Grandin Comes To Pa. To Discuss Animal Handling

as farmers that we used to be," said Kellett. "The farm population has declined considerably and therefore the media is a powerful lobby. Everyone (the general public) likes farmers and everyone likes food, but you have to be careful about the media and the image you put forth.

"Legislators respond to lobbying groups," said Kellett, who pointed out that show horses have extensive protection because of lobbying groups.

"There is a powerful lobby that comes from pictures and media, and those laws change fairly easily across the U.S. when pictures become available to the public," she said.

Dr. Temple Grandin, assistant professor of Animal Science at Colorado State University, was the session's keynote speaker.

Grandin has authored more than 300 scientific articles on animal handling. She also designs livestock handling facilities that are in use worldwide.

Grandin has been involved in the livestock industry for 30 years — the first 25 she spent designing equipment and teaching producers about animal husbandry.

The last five years, however, she has been hired by McDonalds, Wendy's, and Burger King as they seek to balance producer interests and consumer concerns about animal welfare.

"Economic factors bring about change, and one of the things I've tried to do is direct this change into something practical and scientific," said Grandin.

For the fast-food restaurants, Grandin has taken to the road to train packing house auditors who monitor animal handling practices. She is working on putting together a simple, objective measurement system for auditors to use.

"Continuous measurement makes it possible to measure improvement and maintain a high standard," she said. "You manage the things that you measure, and animal welfare can be measured."

Her scoring system includes stunning efficacy, animal vocalization, slipping and falling, and electric prod use.

"I thought that if I'd get the hardware (the animal handling facilities that she designed) installed, everything would be fine." However Grandin is now training people to use the facilities, which she refers to as installing her "software."

Grandin's prior work included employment for the USDA in 1996, when she was hired to do a survey of slaughterhouses. She discovered plants that had problems with equipment and management to plants "that have kept good standards all along."

Animals are not afraid of slaughter but they are afraid of shadows, shiny pieces of metal, or air blowing in their faces, she said. "Get down in the chute and see what the animal is seeing, and get rid of distractions."

She also recommended exchanging electric prods for flags to move animals more quietly. "That last five minutes in the plant, as they go up the chute, we can cause really bad quality problems in pork," said Grandin.

Animal handling facilities should be well-lit, lighting the path in front of the animal but not directly in its eyes, said Grandin.

She also suggested having a ramp to go over top of an existing ramp for piglets transported in a cattle track, since piglets can injure their dew claws.

In addition, "if you are building a new hog facility, please make 30-36-inch wide alleys, enough that two pigs can walk down side by side," she said.

Walking through the pig pens often will train them to "just quietly get up and flow about you — it makes a world of difference in how they handle and load," she said.

"Producers need to ask themselves what the public would think about their handling practices," said Grandin.

More information about her animal handling practices and facilities is available at www.grandin.com.

Other presenters during the conference included Robert Ruth, Hershey, president of Country View Family farms, a hog operation.

"As we move forward as an industry, we're finding that we can't avoid some of these (animal handling) issues," said Ruth, who discussed methods of working with the media.

Temple Grandin Comes To Pa. To Discuss Animal Handling

Do not avoid the subject, he advised, but rather be direct and positive. "We ought to be proud of our track record," he said.

Understanding is a key to communication, according to Ruth. "People just want to try to understand, and that's our job," he said.

Producers can help the media understand that it is not in a farmer's best interests to mistreat an animal, Ruth suggested.

"Tell the public that farmers are continually looking for new and better ways to raise livestock.

"Be positive, be factual, relate to current society issues, and be truthful. Our job is to protect and raise our animals in the most productive and safe environment we possibly can," Ruth said.

Helen Aceto, University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine, also discussed agriculture and the media. "As far as the public goes, the key to this questions is that perception is reality," she said. "The bottom line is that the consumer is now the center of the universe," said Aceto. She noted that animal welfare, environmental stewardship, food security, and public health and safety issues are now also a focus.

The third place team, Westmoreland 4-H, is, from left, Dawn Dancey, coach, April Hawkey, Kate Schramm, Jacob Logan, and J.J. Himler.

Farmers should also convey "that bigger is not always bad with comfortable housing and appropriate nutrition," she said.

Paul Sauder, from R.W. Sauder, Inc., said that he "once dreaded" to meet the public to present agriculture's side of the story, but has since seen the benefit to letting the public "know who we are and put a name with a face," he said. "We always have to make sure that we don't turn them away when they ask for a tour," he said.

In an interview, keep the topics "from becoming an emotional issue. The key word is 'based upon science.' Take it out of the emotional realm and put it in the science base that we have to work with," said Sauder.

Other speakers included Lou Moore, Penn State, who presented a swine market outlook, Marc Tosiano, Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service, who gave an update on the census for agriculture, and Tom Moyer, Hatfield Quality Meats, who discussed the financial impact of improper swine handling.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

PLANTER TUNE-UP
Del Voight, Capitol Region Extension Agronomy Agent, Lebanon

There are only about 75 working days left before the planter will again enter the field and begin the process of providing forage for farms across the region.

The planting operation is one of the most critical steps in achieving yield and quality. It also is the biggest reason why the adoption of narrow rows has failed because of improper planter tune-up.

The goal of the planter is to open a furrow, place the seed at the same depth so that each seed will develop, and create a "tabletop look" in the field. This uniform stand and emergence time will allow the plants to compete evenly throughout the season and achieve maximum sunlight interception and conversion to economic yield.

When plants fail to emerge uniformly, the late-emerging plants will act as a weed and result in a net loss in yield. Skips in the row will result in weed encroachment and the loss of yield from that part of the field. Those late emergers also end in barren or nubbin ears and further reduce quality.

Lynn Hoffman, former Penn State Agronomist, related that in some cases missing plants (skips) and late emergence because of seed depth variation may result in a 30 percent reduction in overall yield.

Planter maintenance is critical to the success of planting. You only have one chance to set the crop stage for success and it begins by getting the planter into the shop and tuning it now and not during the key times that the planter should be planting instead of sitting in the shop. Here are some things to consider.

The initial opener (wavy coulter or fluted) serves to cut open the residue to allow the disc opener to work its magic. The front coulter bears the brunt of wear and should be checked and replaced more often. Be sure the coulters do not cut deeper that the disc openers by checking its alignment with the disc opener.

Most plant stands that I view that suffered from planter error were victim to the oversight of the disc openers, not to mention that the front coulter is shot. The disc openers can be easily checked and replaced by the operator. You can be sure I will check them if the stand I view is poor.

The disc opener serves to lay a V trench that receives the seed and sets it at the bottom of the V. If the discs are worn, the trench turns into a W and the seed is placed at varying positions, ending up with uneven emergence. Simply taking two business cards and positioning them one from between the disc openers on the bottom and one from top should reveal that they stop about 3 inches from each other. At least the card should not be easily slipped between them. I have seen them as wide as a half inch between.

In some cases, some shims placed on the shaft will help move the discs together. Replacement may be necessary. Take the time now to replace them and not when the soil temperature is 50 degrees.

The closing wheels can make or break the planting process. On loose ground, closing wheels with too much pressure can kick the seed up in the V slot and ruin the disc opener's intended purpose. The goal of the closing wheel is to close the V slot and firm soil around the seed. On hard-packed soil, the closing wheels will need more pressure (maybe even cast-closing wheels) to ensure seed coverage and firming.

I have been in too many fields that the V slot is left almost wide open because of a failure to provide enough down pressure to close the furrow. The closing wheels should be in the centerline of the disc openers. To check, simply place a ruler between the discs wedged on the center line and then again between the closing wheels. It should be center. Normally I discover that the outer units are bent because of the turning action of the planter when the units might not have been completely out of the soil.

Sure, most of you will say, 'I don't have that problem,' but have you checked lately? While you are there, check the gauge wheels that control the planting depth. Gauge wheels should touch the double-disc openers when a load is on the planter unit in the field. If gauge wheels are too far away from the disc blades, soil will get into the seed trench before the seed gets there! Again, shims can be used to take up the space.

Most common planters have a seed hopper that holds the seed and the seed drops through a tube to the disc openers. In addition, many planters have an eye sensor that sees the seed and transmits a signal to a unit to let the operator know the seed is moving through the tube. The tube and eye should be cleaned.

Mice nests that somehow get into the tubes should be removed. The seed metering device should be cleaned as well. Air and vacuum metering devices should be disassembled and cleaned and all air supply tubes and seals checked for leaks or cracks.

On finger pickup units, the brush and back plate should be viewed and worn parts replaced. Many dealer locations offer a service to check the metering devices for proper function for a modest fee. I highly recommend this service. Now or last fall is a good time to get that accomplished.

All normal grease and lubricants should be used on chains and key pivot points. Each planter unit should be lifted to determine if the bushings need to be tighten or replaced. If more than an inch of play is noted when the unit is lifted, the bushing should be replaced. While the planter is lifted (be sure stops are in place for safety), check to see if all units are level with each other from side to side.

Many planters come with a fertilizer or insecticide delivery systems. These too will need attention. In some fields that were injured by fertilizer, the application of the materials was too close to the seed, or in one case three out of six rows had fertilizer applied directly on the seed, causing severe stand loss. Check to see that a 2 by 2 placement of the material is achieved by again using a set of straight sticks center on the seed trench and another center on the fertilizer tube. If liquid, be sure the nozzle is directed to the proper location. Dry insecticide boxes should also be cleaned of mouse nests and the metering device checked for wear.

It is critical to be sure that the T-band or in-furrow tube is properly placed. In one example, there was a failure to control insects because of the T-band applicator being partially plugged or completely missing. Again, you can be sure that when I visit your farm for a complaint, I will be visiting your planter.

One final note is leveling. The bottom of tongue should be leveled with a bubble level. To accomplish a level planter, the draw bar can be raised or lowered as needed.

For more information on planter maintenance, plan to attend the Regional Dairy and Silage Producer Family Day Feb. 11 at the Lebanon Exposition Center, which will feature a hands-on session on planter tune-up for your benefit. Call (717) 270-4391 for details.

Planter tune-up is not rocket science. There are basic low-cost steps that one needs to give priority to and recognize the importance of maintaining to ensure proper stands.

Youth Compete In Simmental Breeding Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In the junior Simmental breeding show, Emily Whitmoyer and Matthew Blauch came out with the top two heifers, according to show judge Gordon.

Emily's heifer, "Sweet Night" caught the judge's eye, who awarded the heifer with the grand champion nod.

Taking home the grand champion title, Emily, 15, is the daughter of Les and Mary Whitmoyer.

Along with and her sister, MaryEllen, Emily showed five Simmental cattle for Mountain View Farm, a 20-acre operation in Fredericksburg, which also has a few Dorset breeding sheep, besides the Simmental herd.

Emily, who began her show ring career at the Farm Show, has been exhibiting at the Farm Show for four years. A sophomore at Northern Lebanon High School, she is in 4-H and FFA.

Matthew Blauch's heifer won reserve champion. Matthew, the son of Doug and Pam Blauch, is from the family's Cattle Rock Acres. The farm includes 46 acres of pasture for their cow/calf, mostly-Simmental herd.

"Tice's Red Orbit," which he purchased at Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) in October, won the title for Matthew at Monday's competition in the Equine Arena. The heifer was stylish and had volume and thickness, according to judge David Gordon.

Matthew has been exhibiting cattle since he was eight years old and shows both FFA and 4-H projects. The Blauch family brought five head of cattle to the Farm Show — four for Matthew and one for his sister Valerie, 13, to exhibit.

David Gordon, who has an associate degree in agriculture from Butler Community College, Kansas and was on the college's livestock judging team, judged the show.

Heifer Calf Tops Angus Female Show At Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Quality ran deep in the Angus female show, but Rains Pride Lucy prevailed over all.

Dale Rains, Mercer, Mercer County, lead his January 2002 heifer calf, Rains Pride Lucy to champion Angus heifer honors.

Rains first topped the heifer calf division before garnering this top award. Not only did Dale Rains lead the champion female in the show, but he also is a co-owner and breeder of the reserve champion female as well.

Rains Forever Barbie, co-owned by Rains Angus, Mercer, Mercer County; Weaver Show Cattle, New Holland, Lancaster County; and Mt. Valley Angus, Lititz, Lancaster County, took the reserve champion female spot. She first topped the Junior Division.

Following the Heifer Show, judge John Pyne, Mount Desert, Maine evaluated 27 Angus bulls. After thorough examination, JDH Key Heir was selected as the champion Angus bull.

Exhibited by JDH Cattle Company, Dover, York County, JDH Key Heir first topped the junior bull division. Easily following the champion, Golden Rule Saugahatchee 220, was lead to reserve champion bull honors by Carl Detweiler, Roaring Springs, Bedford County. This bull first topped the junior bull calf division.

Susquehanna Extension Helps County Residents Solve Pond Problems

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.)—Ponds can provide many recreational benefits to homeowners, but they have their share of problems, says a water resources specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Some may develop leaks or fill with sediment," says Extension Associate Bryan Swistock. "The water may be muddy, or choked with weeds and algae. And sometimes, that big fish you hoped would be there for the kids to catch just doesn't materialize."

To address the basics of pond management, experts from Penn State, the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission and Mansfield University will offer a live satellite clinic from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Feb. 27. The program will be aired locally at the County Office Building in Montrose through Penn State Cooperative Extension, of Susquehanna County. The actual program will begin at 7:00 p.m.

Swistock recommends that people who own a pond develop a management strategy depending on their goals.

"How you manage your pond depends on your goals," he explains. "People who want a pond for swimming, for instance, usually want a clean, sandy bottom without many weeds. But if you want a good fishery, you'll need some plants and structures."

During the program, the experts will offer tips and advice on common pond problems and proper management. Attendees will be able to ask questions by telephone and fax.

"The most frequent questions involve the control of aquatic plants and weeds," says Swistock, "so we'll spend time discussing how to identify and control nuisance plants and algae. We also get a lot of questions about fisheries, so we'll discuss the best kinds of fish to stock, the species to avoid and how to harvest to keep the populations balanced."

Other topics will include getting permits, general pond maintenance, and testing water quality. Professional pesticide applicators can receive re-certification credits for attending the program. The clinic is free, but pre-registration is required. For more information on the satellite program or on pond management, contact the Susquehanna County office of Penn State Cooperative Extension at 278-1158.

York Farm Families Honored

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.)—In one of his final appearances as Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, Sam Hayes saluted agriculture in general and two York County farm families in particular.

Hayes was a special guest speaker at the York Chamber of Commerce's annual agricultural banquet, hosted Jan. 23 at the Wisehaven Banquet and Expo Center.

During his brief remarks, the secretary emphasized that profitability is the key to maintaining agriculture as a viable Pennsylvania industry.

"You must nurture this industry, so it is not discouraged to the point of leaving this county," said Hayes to the gathering of farmers and agribusiness representatives. "We must do everything in our power to nurture and care for our agriculture, because everyone depends on it."

The agriculture secretary reminded his audience of agriculture's importance in defending the nation's freedom and warned of the danger in becoming dependent on others to feed and clothe our people. He further encouraged those in and supportive of production agriculture to carry the message of agriculture vulnerability to local muncipalities, government and to the public.

York County Sen. Mike Waugh, who introduced Hayes, acknowledged the changes in state governmental administration, noting that "as in the case with Sam Hayes, sometimes a transfer is bittersweet."

In memory of the late Dr. John Swartz, a long-time agriculture extension agent who died two years ago, a $50,000 scholarship endowment fund is now in place at Penn State/York. The first scholarship recipient will be selected later this year. Swartz had served as a Lancaster "county agent" for many years, transferring to join the extension office in his home York County only a few months before his death.

Honored as the Chamber's farm family of the year was the Richlawn dairy and crops farm, operated by the families of brothers Rodney and Robert Smyser, East Berlin Road.

The Smyser operation includes 85 milking head of high-production and type registered Holstein cattle and more than 1200 acres of forage and grain crops. Rodney and his wife, Joyce, have two sons, Jed and Brian, both employed full-time on the farm. Robert and his wife, Lisa, are the parents of Lindsay, 13, and Paul, 11. The Smyser family is a long-time participant in farm improvement and conservation measures and has received numerous conservation honors, including the 1998 Chesapeake Bay Clean Water award.

York County agribusiness of the year was Brown's Orchards and Retail Market. With the Brown family, from left, is former Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes congratulating Brenda, Travis, Scott, Mandy, Nona, and Stan Brown.

Named outstanding industry award winners was Brown's Orchard and Farm Market, operated by the Stan and Nona Brown family, Loganville. In the mid-1950s, Stan Brown's father, Earl, moved his family from York to kets, small volume food stores and exports.

The marketing administrator said they are in the process of establishing voluntary guidelines that will provide a framework for the mandatory guidelines which are to take effect October 2004. The key issues involved are the defining the products with the mixed ingredients and the methods of notification.

Without the slides that accompanied his talk, Sessions would probably been engaged in a real exercise in futility. The slides denoted the specifics in the COOL program and explanations of the terminology, which his audience could follow along with his comments.

Getting down to the specifics on labeling beef products, the congenial Sessions was barraged with comments and questions. He reminded his audience that he was "just the messenger."

The beef animal must be born, raised and slaughtered in the U.S. for the product to carry the U.S. label of origin, Sessions said. A verifiable record keeping audit trail would be required. Identification of each animal from birth to slaughter would be necessary.

In answer to one question, Session responded that a beef carcass imported from Canada and fabricated into cuts in the U.S. would have to be labeled a product of Canada. Also, ground beef would need to have all its components identified, namely that imported lean ground stuff from other countries (that was considered a good thing).

And so it went, one scenario after another questioned. The approximately 100 cattle feeders (out of 150) who remained for the entire program are now not so sure that COOL is a good thing for U.S. beef producers.

Sessions said there is an extended comment period on the COOL voluntary guidelines. It will end April 9. Cattle feeders can respond with comments to: William T. Sessions, USDA/AMS, Room 2091-S, 1400 Independence Ave., Washington, D.C. 20250; or http://www.ams.usda.gov/cool

Moore's Upbeat Outlook

Penn State ag economist Lou Moore opened this year's annual Cattle Feeder's Day program, with his always popular cattle industry analysis as he has been doing for more than 45 years.

With the aid of projected charts and his detailed lists, Moore presented the positive and negatives in the general economy as well as the agricultural economy with his perennial good humor.

Assessing the current cattle market, Moore said 2003 will be a better year for beef. The conditions are more upbeat than they have been in the last five years for the cattle business, he said.

USDA Market Reporting

Taylor Cox, officer in charge of the USDA's Market News Office in New Holland, gave a detailed account of compiling a market report and explained its terminology, including trends, demand, activity, and also the quality grades and yield grades.

Cox talked about mandatory packer reporting (MPR) from its beginning in 1999 and the necessary adjustments that were made to include more reported prices. He said the livestock reports are sent from the St. Joseph, Mo. market news office and the meat reports from the Des Moines office.

To supplement the mandatory reports, Cox said the USDA has returned to some voluntary market price reporting with reporters manning the phones to contact buyers and sellers for information. They began Monday, Feb. 3, phoning contacts in Texas and Nebraska with the possibility of going to other areas.

For marketing information, Cox said producers can call his office at (717) 354-2391 and/or the MPR office at St. Joseph, Mo., (816) 238-0678.

Retailing, Consumer Trends

Al Kober, retail director, Certified Angus Beef (CAB), spoke on consumer trends in the beef business and the changes in retailing that have taken place, namely consolidations, buyouts, and foreign owners. Kober is well-known to area producers as the retired meat man at Clemens Markets.

The number one change and the one having the greatest impact on the beef business is Wal-Mart, Kober said. He addressed this at some length. He also talked about food safety and the use of irradiation.

In ending his discussion, Kober stressed producing a quality product, and he told the beef producers, "We are all in the food business, one bite at a time every time."

Other topics at Cattle Feeder's Day included: An update by Scott Wright on the Pennsylvania Beef Council's Beef Quality Assurance program and the Blueprint for Success program; John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist, speaking on Marbling and Beef Quality in place of Robbi Pritchard, South Dakota State University, who was grounded by airline complications; and Jay Smoker, Lancaster County extension, who briefly spoke on his field of expertise, West Nile Virus.

Chet Hughes, livestock extension agent, chaired the program and acknowledged the following members of his planning committee: John Comerford; Jim Hogue, Agri-Basics; Bob Livingston, South Branch Farms, York Co; Bill McCoy, McCoy Cattle Company; Bernard Nissley, Nissley Bros. Feedlot; Paul Slayton, Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC); Steve VanLannen, Packerland Packing; and Scott Wright, PBC.

York Farm Families Honored

the Loganville area to begin fruit farming after his employment site closed down.

Business at the family's small road-side stand had grown well beyond capacity by the 1980s. Sixteen years ago, Stan and Nona relocated the retailing site a few hundred yards south of the original location along the Old Susquehanna Trail and built a new market, including a bakery. Expansion has continued several times since, with additions including a greenhouse and picnic pavilion overlooking the orchard. With 125 full and part-time employees on staff, Browns' Orchard and Retail Market has become a York County tradition for customers from the surrounding region and south into Maryland.

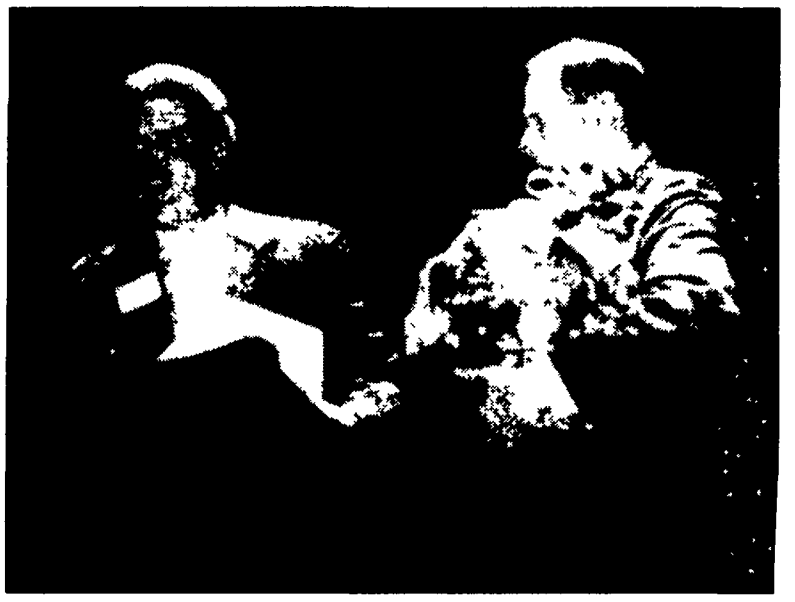
Partnering with his parents is son Scott Brown, who oversees the orchard and field production segment of the farm, and his wife, Brenda, who manages the office and staff administration. Their children, Mandy, a college elementary-education major, and 15-year-old Travis, both assist part-time at the market as the fourth-generation of Brown's orchardists and retailers.

A number of award-winners were honored during the banquet, including the presentation of a Century Farm award to Dean and Loris Crone, for their Dover area farm. Four families were recognized for opening their operations for public tour on the annual Farm Visitation Day. Visitation Day hosts included the West Wind Bison Farm, operated by the J.C. Hale family, the Backcross Chestnut Tree Farm of Robert and Ann Leffel, the Heindel family's Brown Cow market and Hope Acres dairy farm, and Allegro Winery and Vineyard, operated by Carl Helrich and Kris Miller.

One team participated during 2002 in the Chamber's tradition of role-exchange between agriculture producers and business representatives. Scott Brown of Brown's Orchards and Farm Market traded work days with Georgianna Schreck, representing the York County Chamber of Commerce.

Featured during the program was Keith Matheny, a "mentalist," who entertained with an array of mental and memory gymnastics.

Joyce and Rodney Smyser accepted congratulations from former Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes. The Smyser's dairy and crops family partnership was honored as the York Chamber of Commerce' farm family of the year.



In one of his final official appearances, former Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes accepted a York County fruit basket from Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Mike Waugh. Sen. Waugh operates a York County farm and raises draft horses in addition to his legislative responsibilities.

Ornamental Germplasm Center Site Of Floriculture Forum

COLUMBUS, Ohio—The Ohio State University Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center (OPGC) will host the 2003 National Floriculture Forum, an annual event highlighting research, education and collaborative efforts within the floriculture industry.

The three-day forum, an activity of the American Society for Horticultural Science Floriculture, Floriculture Education Working Groups and the Ornamental Plant Breeding Group, will be conducted Feb. 21-23 in Columbus, Ohio. Registration is $50.

The event is sponsored by the American Floral Endowment, along with Acme Engineering and Manufacturing, Argus, Cryo Canada, H.E. Anderson Company, Ludy Greenhouses Manufacturing Corporation, PL Lights Systems, The Scotts Company, and Wadsworth Control Systems.

David Tay, director of OPGC, said the forum is geared towards researchers, educators and industry professionals and is designed to address floriculture issues, form collaborative working relationships and share educational and research experiences.

"One of the objectives of the forum is to encourage collaboration between the USDA, universities, and professionals in the floriculture industry and botanic gardens," said Tay. "There is also a focus on germplasm conservation, plant breeding, research and teaching."

Tay said that the OPGC site for the forum provides a unique opportunity for researchers, students and industry professionals to be introduced in the Center and its role in ornamental plant germplasm conservation and utilization.

The Center, a cooperative effort between Ohio State and the USDA's Agricultural Research Service, was developed to save, assess, and promote the use of herbaceous ornamental plant germplasm. It is the first such undertaking in the world.

"At this stage of the Center's development, it is timely to have an open forum with strong representation from universities, industries, public research agencies, botanical gardens and arboreta to discuss and contribute to the organization and formulation of a most appropriate implementation plan," said Tay. "The aim is to make OPGC into a truly national program."

The three-day event will include speakers from the USDA and the floriculture industry on such topics as funding, industry trends, information on germplasm breeding and floriculture programs and the role of botanic gardens in the floriculture industry. The conference will also include a tour of The Scotts Company, OPGC, and Ohio State greenhouses.

For more information on the 2003 National Floriculture Forum, contact David Tay at (614) 292-3708, or e-mail tay.9@osu.edu, or log on to http://hcs.osu.edu/opgc.

FSA Urges Crop Producers To Update Acreage, Yield Info

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Corn, soybean, and small-grain growers must update their base acreage and yield figures at their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office by April 1 in order to receive the best benefit options during the next six years of crop programs under the new federal Farm Bill.

"They need to call as soon as possible to make an appointment," said Richard Pallman, Pennsylvania FSA executive director. "It's not a simple process, and it does take time."

When the one-time base acreage and yield updates are completed, annual signup for each of the following years of the program will be a relatively straightforward process, Pallman said.

The FSA is enrolling farmers into the Direct and Countercyclical Payment Program (DCP). The DCP is designed to be an equitable means of assistance for growers of agricultural feeds and grains. This program provides grain producers with the best price protection program afforded farmers in several years. Two forms of benefits are made available in DCP.

A guaranteed direct payment is made each year at an established payment rate. Additional payments are issued when market prices are low; this is called a counter-cyclical (CC) payment.

"DCP participation guarantees farm operations direct payments — regardless of market prices — and countercyclical payments — depending on national average market prices. This is a safety net that producers cannot afford to miss," Pallman said.

Countercyclical payments to grain growers over the next six years will be based on the acreage and yield updates they submit by April 1. Producers who have not taken the initiative to update these figures by April 1 will be "locked in" to their old figures, Pallman said. For many farmers, that could mean much lower countercyclical payments throughout the period than what they could be receiving.

"This is only a one-time deal for (crop producers) to establish their bases and yields," Pallman said. "If a producer does nothing, he can lose the opportunity to increase the dollars he can get."

Updates will be based on crop acreage and yield information from the years 1998-2001.

At this point, a relatively small percentage of crop farmers in the state have updated their base acreage and yield figures. There are also many producers who have never applied to the program at all.

A significant change from previous crop programs is that landowners must now sign the paperwork in order for a renting farmer to be approved for payments.

Pallman said he believes some farmers who rent cropland are hesitant to participate in the new program because of landowners now being required to sign. Renting farmers may view this as an opportunity for the landowner to raise the rent.

Pennsylvania farmers in general have been slow to sign up with federal programs for a number of reasons, including religious values and the belief that crop prices should be determined in the marketplace, not by government subsidies.

According to Pallman, however, tough economic times and increasing competition in domestic and global grain markets is making it more crucial for Pennsylvania farmers to take advantage of federal subsidies. He noted that farmers in large grain-producing states such as Illinois, Iowa, and Kansas traditionally have a much higher rate of participation in the federal programs, where they are seen as a tool for survival.

For producers who wish to participate, the first step is to decide whether to update their base and yield information for the 1998-2001 time period. Two decisions go hand-in-hand. The first is whether to update the base, or freeze it at the existing 2002 Production Flexibility Contract (PFC) base. In either case, farmers can add eligible oilseed acres. The second decision is whether to freeze yields at the existing 2002 PFC levels or update counter-cyclical payment yields for all covered commodities on the farm.

For producers who did not have a Production Flexibility Contract (PFC) for 2002, it is important to go to their local FSA office and establish their bases. The county FSA committee will assign a direct payment yield to each farm with history acres for the period of 1998-2001 which was not on a PFC for 2002.

If growers take no action to update bases by April 1 and are currently participating in USDA programs, then bases will default to 2002 PFC acres plus minimum eligible oilseed acres, or 2002 PFC acreage only.

In many cases the default option will deprive the operator of valuable program benefits. In some instances, a grower will be able to replace low paying base acreage with a crop providing higher benefits. Soybean growers may be able to substitute the soybean history for oats production flexibility history.

For example, take a producer who discontinued planting oats in a crop rotation and began planting 50 acres of soybeans in 1998. If the producer visits FSA by April 1, he can replace the oats base with his soybean history. Over the six years of this program, the producer will have increased his price protection over $4,000.

For a producer who has always planted 100 acres of corn which is reflected in his PFC contract, if the producer visits FSA, he can provide proven yield information to increase his counter-cyclical payments. If his PFC yield is 90 bushel per acre but his proven yield is 107 bushels per acre, although his acreage does not change, the producer will have gained $2,300 in price protection over the next six years of this program.

To take these steps or to find out more, contact your local FSA office.

Direct And Countercyclical Payment Program Questions And Answers

Question 1: What if I have never participated in Farm Service Agency Programs?

Answer: Update planted acreage from 1998 through 2001 by providing evidence of existence and disposition of the crop. You can also provide production records to establish a proven yield for the counter cyclical payment portion of the program. This updated information will be used as a basis for your participation.

Question 2: I have reported my planted acreage every year but I never participated. What do I need to do?

Answer: Your acreage base for each covered commodity will be the average of your plantings from 1998 through 2001. If you can provide production from those years you can prove a yield to be used for the counter cyclical portion of your benefits. If you do not provide production evidence FSA will assign a yield to be used for both direct and counter cyclical program payments.

Question 3: I picked up a new farm this year. Can I enroll the farm in this program?

Answer: Yes The history established for a farm will stay with that farm for the life of this farm bill. The previous producer would have reported the history of plantings or you can obtain the information and provide it to FSA to update the record.

Question 4: How can I prepare for my first visit to FSA?

Answer: Producers should review the acreage and yield histories recently mailed to each owner and farm operator. If all the information is correct you are ready to make a base and yield selection. You can calculate the benefits available under each option by using the base and yield analyzer. This tool is available at the following website: WWW.fsa.usda.gov/pas/farmbill/tools.asp If you do not have access to the Internet FSA can help you evaluate the different options.

Question 5: Why does a landowner need to get involved in my decision?

Answer: Bases and yields are used in calculating the benefits available for this program. The better the base and yield the more attractive the farm is to rent. Since the rentability of a farm is important to the owner he has an interest in choosing the best base and yield options available. Also, landowner participation in the base and yields selection process is required by the Legislation passed by Congress.

Question 6: Who receives the benefits on rented farms?

Answer: Farm program benefits are paid to the person with the risk in the crop. If the crop is shared the benefits must be shared. If a farm is cash rented, the farm operator would generally be eligible for the benefits.

Question 7: What happened to loans and loan deficiency payments?

Answer: Loans and loan deficiency payments are now available on grain produced on any farm whether enrolled or not enrolled. Loan rates have been adjusted slightly but current high prices have made deficiency payments rare in 2002. We still suggest you check with your county office prior to feeding or selling grain if interested in a deficiency payment. The final availability date for loans and loan deficiency payments is March 31st for small grains and May 31st for corn and soybean.

Question 8: When can I expect to receive payment?

Answer: FSA is issuing benefits to growers for 2002 and 2003. Final direct payments for 2002 are being reduced by the amount paid under the Production Flexibility Program for that year on the same farm. Advance 2003 payments equal to 50% of the guaranteed rate are available upon enrollment. Counter Cyclical Payments for 2002 have been projected at zero so no advance is being issued for 2002.

Question 9: This program sounds so complex. How will I ever figure it out?

Answer: FSA has the tools to help you make educated decisions. The program is really quite simple for those growers that have their records up to date. The program has two basic payment calculations that are very similar to previous programs. Direct payments are similar to Production Flexibility Program benefits. Counter Cyclical Payments are similar to the deficiency payments issued under the Production Adjustment Programs of the 80s'.

Question 10: How are payment rates determined?

Answer: Direct payment rates have been set by law at specific levels through 2007. Counter Cyclical Payment rates are determined by monitoring national market prices during the first 12 months following harvest. The market price is added to the direct payment rate to determine the effective price. The effective price is subtracted from the target price to determine the counter cyclical payment rate. The exact amount of the payment will not be know for one full year after harvest although advance payments will be available during the marketing year.

Question 11: How does an owner provide their consent to participate?

Answer: The landowner must sign form CCC-515 to indicate his agreement on base and yield selection. Payments will be issued upon presentation of a cash lease or the owner's agreement to the payment shares. On farms where it has been documented that you operate the land, you can provide a certification that you have a cash lease. In this case benefits would be paid after June 30th of that respective crop year.

Question 12: Where do I go to enroll?

Answer: Your local Farm Service Agency has the information and forms to enroll in the DCP Program. It is suggested that you make an appointment prior to stopping by. The sign-up process takes more time than previous program sign-ups. If you make an appointment you will avoid long waits and the FSA staff can prepare for your visit.

Question 13: Is conservation compliance a requirement for participation in this program?

Answer: Participants must have and be implementing a Conservation Plan. If the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) determines there is highly erodible land on the farm, you will be required to certify that you are following an NRCS developed Conservation Plan, or self-certify that you are implementing a conservation system. FSA recommends producers review the NRCS fact sheet on conservation compliance or discuss the contents of their plan with NRCS personnel.

Question 14: What if I can't contact a landowner or he won't sign the forms?

Answer: On April 2, all farms will be assigned a base and yield. The base will include the 7-year Production Flexibility Contract acres plus the eligible soybeans. This is considered option 2 under the program and it may not be the best option for the farm. Getting the owner's concurrence is your responsibility. If you are picking up new farms it is important that you know how to reach the owner. You are required to have documentation of operator-ship on these farms prior to receipt of benefits. Participants may self certify to a conservation plan which they are using.

Question 15: What can I do if some of the landowners on one of my farms will not sign?

Answer: All of the landowners on a farm must agree on a base option by April 1, 2003. If not all of the landowners will sign you may be able to have the farm reconstituted. This would mean you could break that farm into multiple farms. The farms for which you can get the owner to select a base option would be able to be enrolled right away. Those you can not get signed can wait until after April 1st. On April 2nd all farms will be assigned a base and yield. The base for a farm with no base election by the owner will be the seven year Production Flexibility Contract (PFC) acres on that farm plus the eligible soybean acres. This is considered option 2 under the program. It may or may not be your best option. If the farm had no PFC acres the new base will be the eligible soybean acres only.

Question 16: If I have never reported crops before, what evidence do I need to prove existence and disposition of the crop?

Answer: To prove existence of the crop you may use seed receipts, receipts for cleaning of seed, custom work receipts, documentation of contract to produce a specific crop, aerial slides, documentation obtained and certified by another government agency, or third party verification. To prove disposition of the crop you may provide sales slips, documentation of contract to produce a specific crop, records showing the crop was fed to livestock, proof of custom harvesting, third party verification, or if unharvested - records supporting the destruction of the crop. You may not use third party verification for proof of both existence and disposition. You should check with your local FSA Office on the information you need to get credit for this missing acreage.

Critical dates: base and yield updates ends April 1, 2003. Direct and countercyclical payments program ends June 2, 2003.

New Farmers, New Generation

Getting Started in Farming

Nothing in farming is simple.

Over the last nine years I have talked to hundreds, maybe even thousands, of people who want to get started in farming. Some grew up on family farms, but unfortunately the family farm of their youth is no longer an option. Others have been nudged aside by another, sometimes older sibling. Still others never grew up on a farm, but think they would like to farm because they love working outside, with animals, with nature, etc.

Just recently I spoke to a young man who grew up on a farm that had been in his family for more than 100 years. His parents were struggling to remain profitable in a time of high taxes, low profits, and intense urban pressure. Tired of the long days and low returns, they decided to sell the farm. Unfortunately, he had siblings who didn't want to farm, but wanted the highest dollar their parents could realize on the sale of the farm.

Although the farm was sold several years ago, this young man still could not talk about it without choking up with emotion. His dream to take over the farm was gone and he was reluctant to allow himself to even think about a future in farming. He challenged me, as many previous aspiring farmers have, wanting to know why he should hold out any hope; it was too difficult, too hard to turn a profit, too demanding.

What was unspoken, but I heard, was his desire to be a farmer. His passion for farming was unmistakable. Despite his protestations, he wanted me to tell him how it could be done. What's the answer? As I tell people who want to get started and those who want to transfer their farms to the next generation, there is no cookie-cutter recipe. No farm, farm family, or farmer is alike. I might add that if there was a set way to get into farming, most young entrepreneurs probably wouldn't like it.

So what advice did I give this young man? I suggested that he learn how others have gotten started, talk to them, and learn from them. He should talk to people who have started on family farms, taken over other farms from retiring farmers, or started from scratch. Try to determine and research the best strategy for his family and make decisions on what will work for him. I could provide information and guidance, but ultimately he needed to pursue and seek out the answers.

I also suggested that he attend workshops and read about others who got started in farming, and how. The ways to enter vary from starting small, with no money, and retaining an off-farm job, to borrowing money and signing production contracts. Only he could decide what was right for him.

My observations and experience indicate that the more successful beginners have started small and taken it one step at a time. By doing so, they were more likely to be successful and able to advance to the next step than by jumping in and trying to accomplish it all at once. Otherwise, it truly can be overwhelming.

I said, "Start with the assets that are going to give you the most return, your labor and your passion. Once you have experience under your belt and have learned how to manage your farm business, you can think about purchasing land. Is it possible to get started in farming today? Certainly!"

No Longer the "Best-Kept Secret" in Agriculture

Dow AgroSciences is working to shed the idea that we are "the best-kept secret in agriculture" We took that recent comment from a highly reputable dealer as a compliment It was his way of saying that we are an ag company with a future, and somebody worth doing business with He also felt the world of ag needed to know about our growth

Therefore, here are some things that have happened recently at Dow AgroSciences – things we believe make us a company worth doing business with

- We are launching new Keystone* and Keystone LA herbicides this season These soil-applied acetochlor and atrazine premixes give us the most complete, effective corn herbicide portfolio in the industry
- We possess the second-largest portfolio of U S ag biotechnology patents, which has led to the recent launch of Herculex™ I Insect Protection, a new, broader-spectrum in-plant insect protection trait for corn Also in development is a trait that will protect young plants against corn rootworm
- Our recent purchases of Mycogen Seeds and Cargill Hybrid Seeds will allow the seed and crop protection divisions of our business to work closely together to make corn products – both for biotech and conventional hybrids – that produce optimal yields
- Our acquisition of Rohm & Haas Co made us a leader in the fungicide marketplace and boosted our position in horticulture, fruits and vegetables, permanent tree crops and turf and ornamental

Coalition Calls For Fair Livestock/Poultry Markets

WASHINGTON, D.C — A broad based coalition of cattle, hog, poultry, consumer, rural, and other groups are asking Congress to take seven specific steps to address market concentration, restore livestock market competition, and impart fairness in agricultural production and marketing contracts. A letter signed by 127 organizations was recently delivered to members of Congress. The letter describes the dismal condition of today's markets and presents a blueprint for strengthening the vitally important livestock and poultry production sectors.

As a blueprint for remedying the anticompetitive forces prevalent in today's livestock and poultry markets, the groups are asking Congress to enact the following legislation that was introduced but not passed during the last congressional session:

- Ban on ownership of livestock by the biggest packers;
- Producer Protection Act to establish minimum contract standards;
- Transparency/minimum open market bill to prevent open, competitive markets from completely disappearing;
- Captive Supply Reform Act to make livestock marketing contracts open and competitive;
- Clarify the meaning of undue preferences to clarify that preferential pricing is justified only for real differences in product value or actual and quantifiable differences in acquisition and transaction costs;
- Close the poultry loopholes in the Packers & Stockyards Act to give USDA the authority to bring administrative actions against poultry dealers; and
- Bargaining rights for contract producers to close loopholes in the Agricultural Fair Practices Act of 1967 and to require processors to bargain in good faith with producer organizations.

The coalition is encouraged by the introduction of the prohibition against packer ownership of livestock and the livestock and poultry arbitration bills in the Senate on the first day of the 108th Congress. The groups hope and expect that legislation addressing all of the issues referenced in their letter will soon be re-introduced in the new Congress, and urge their prompt and full consideration by the House and Senate agriculture committees and other committees of jurisdiction.

"Our country's farmers and ranchers are asking for nothing more than a fair market and a competitive share of the $900 billion that consumers insert into the food and agriculture economy annually," the letter concluded.

Kathy Lawrence of the National Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture, a member of the coalition, said, "The diversity of the organizations signed on to this letter reflects how important issues related to competition and concentration are to farm and ranch families, their communities, the economy, the environment, and consumers. The unity and solidarity among the groups in the coalition is outstanding."

New Farmers Break Ground: New York Project Nurtures Immigrant Farmers

Adam Matthews
Cornell Small Farms Program

The U.S. has long been the land of opportunity, as well as the land of the farmer. The tradition continues today in New York with new immigrant farmers from six different countries in Central and South America. Although these new immigrants come from countries and cultures with vast agricultural experience, they face new challenges when they relocate. In the U.S., immigrant farmers must overcome the same obstacles as all other farmers while adjusting to a new country and culture.

Now in its third year, Cornell Cooperative Extension of New York City's New Farmer Development Project has been helping new farmers overcome the challenges of getting started in farming. This collaborative program between CUCE-NYC, Greenmarket-CUNY and the NYS Department of Agriculture and Markets was developed to encourage a new generation of skilled farmers to farm the land in downstate New York. The program works to increase each producer's ability to supply New York City and the region's farmers' market system by facilitating the entry of ethnically diverse individuals into sustainable agriculture.

The New Farmer Development Project recruits individuals interested in becoming independent farmers and/or working in farm-related jobs, with an emphasis on management, not farm labor. The program only accepts individuals who have previous farming experience and who are interested in direct (market-oriented) production, but who lack the necessary business expertise to run a successful farm.

The project consists of a pre-season series of training sessions, called "La Nueva Siembra", conducted at cooperative extension offices in Manhattan. During the growing season, participants utilize demonstration plots in Staten Island, Far Rockaway, and Astoria, Queens. The Astoria site, known as the Phoenix Triangle, is operated in cooperation with Goodwill Industries. A new site will be added this year in Long Island City, Queens, under the sponsorship of SilverCup Studios. At each site, participants are trained in raising produce and are assisted with marketing through the NYC Greenmarkets farmers' markets.

Last year, 25 residents from New York City and surrounding counties participated in the project workshops and hands-on instruction. Fifteen fully-attended sessions covered all aspects of production important to new farmers, including what to expect the first year, marketing strategies, transport options, selecting farmers' markets, and niche and ethnic markets. Some participants also completed a certificate "Short Course" in Hydroponics.

In its second growing season, the New Farmer Development Project conducted another series of 15 pre-season training sessions for 25 new farmers. Land was prepared in Long Island City for use by participants interested in demonstration plots. These new sites allowed participants to avoid long-distance weekly commutes to work out-of-town plots.

The success of the program is already beginning to be seen. One participant leased land in Upstate New York, and is marketing eggs and produce at farmers' markets in Tribeca and elsewhere in New York City. Others have taken positions, working with local farmers as managers, or with farmers at the market to assist with sales.

"Everyone benefits from this program," said Norma Brenes, extension educator with Cornell Cooperative Extension of New York City. "The farmers get the information and resources they need to become successful, Greenmarket is able to expand and enrich their present farmers' market operations, and consumers have a dependable source of locally grown and 'exotic' fruits and vegetables."

The promise of developing new farmers can be seen in the work of similar programs in Massachusetts and Minnesota.

As the number of new immigrant farmers continues to grow, programs like the New Farmer Development Project will help ensure the success of a new generation of Americans.

"I think we're beginning to see the renaissance of the American small farm," said Joanna Green, senior extension associate with Cornell University's Small Farms Program. "New immigrant farmers are going to be an increasingly important part of that renaissance."

PMMB Raises Over-Order Premium To $1.40

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) will raise the over-order premium to $1.40 per hundredweight effective from March to June of this year.

On Jan. 27, the PMMB conducted an emergency over-order premium hearing to consider raising the level of the over-order premium. Testimony was received on behalf of Dairylea Cooperative, Dairy Farmers of America Northeast Council, Dairy Farmers of America Mid-East Area Council, Dairy Marketing Services, and the Pennsylvania Grange.

The Board Members found that conditions have changed since Nov. 6, 2002, and testimony given was credible and persuasive in stating that Class I and blend prices are now forecasted to be even lower, milk production in Pennsylvania has continued to decline, premiums paid in the Southeast have increased, and premiums paid in Ohio have increased.

However, based on testimony from the Nov. 6 hearing, board members also found the possibility remains that, because of customer demands, based partly on the level of the over-order premium, some milk dealers have, or will, put plans in motion to move some of their operations out-of-state to avoid paying the over-order premium.

While some circumstances have changed, board members believe that an over-order premium of $1.40 through June 20 strikes the proper balance while providing as much income to the Pennsylvania farmer as possible, maintaining a market in Pennsylvania for Pennsylvania produced milk, and insuring an adequate supply of wholesome milk to Pennsylvania's consumers at a fair price.

In response to the Nov. 6 hearing the board decided to lower the over-order premium of $1.65 in steps to $1.50 in January, $1.40 in February, $1.30 in March, and $1.25 for April-June.

Testimony at the Nov. hearing convinced board members that the market for Pennsylvania milk was threatened because of the difference between the Pennsylvania over-order premium and premiums paid out-of-state. Customers were beginning to demand that Pennsylvania processors seek arrangements that would allow them to avoid paying the over-order premium altogether.

Board members believe that to maintain a strong dairy industry in Pennsylvania, all segments of the industry must be healthy. To continue the long-standing $1.65 over-order premium in relation to out-of-state-milk costs provides a very strong incentive for both in-state and out-of-state processors, based on their customers' demands, to either source their raw milk from out-of-state supplies or to structure their transactions in such a way that the over-order premium is not paid to Pennsylvania producers.

While board members are aware of the financial stress on the state's dairy farmers, and are very concerned about the situation, they believe it would be of no benefit to Pennsylvania producers to set an over-order premium at a level that would cause Pennsylvania processors—for competitive purposes—to seek ways to avoid paying the over-order premium.

Should any of these conditions change and threaten the stability of Pennsylvania's dairy industry, the board can react quickly to hold another emergency hearing to address the problem.

PFB: Mixed Response To Premium Decision

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau has expressed both appreciation and disappointment in response to the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board's (PMMB) decision this week to stop decreases it had scheduled for the over-order milk price for Pennsylvania dairy producers.

"We think the board could have set the premium level at $1.50 for the next four months without any serious problems," said Joel Rotz, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's dairy specialist. "We appreciate the prompt action the board took in preventing further reductions in the over-order premium."

The PMMB, acting on testimony received at a hearing on Jan. 27, voted to maintain the over-order price at $1.40 per hundredweight (cwt.) of milk for March through June, when the remainder of the order expires. PMMB had allowed the over-order price to drop from $1.50/cwt. in January to $1.40 in February. Dairy Marketing Services (DMS), which represents the Dairy Farmers of America and Dairylea cooperatives, had petitioned for the hearing and recommended that the over-order price level be set at $1.50.

PMMB had voted in December to lower the over-order premium in steps from $1.65/cwt. to $1.25 by April and keep it at that level through June.

The over-order price is added to the price of Class I (fluid) milk produced, processed and sold within Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) had submitted a letter to the PMMB in support of the DMS petition for the January hearing. In the letter, PFB reiterated its support for continuing the over-order price at the $1.65 per hundredweight level which was in effect last year. At the very least, PFB wrote PMMB members, the over-order price should not fall below $1.50 for the remainder of the current order's term. PFB pointed out that economic projections presented at the January hearing indicate dairy farmers' economic plight will be even worse than what was anticipated at a hearing last November which led to the PMMB's decision to cut back on the $1.65 over-order premium.

Sustainable Ag Program Primer Released

PINE BUSH, N.Y. — As a service to its partners, the National Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture (National Campaign) has offered the Federal Sustainable Agriculture Program Primer. This resource compiles basic information on a wide range of the programs and policies that the National Campaign and its partner organizations have helped to conceive, develop, promote and/or get funded over the years.

In a simple, user-friendly format, the primer provides a short description of each program, who administers it, how people can access the program (including application deadlines and criteria for eligibility), how the program is funded, the program's status — including various stages of administrative action (rulemaking, implementation, etc.), and where to go for more information.

The Federal Sustainable Agriculture Program Primer is available at http://www.sustainableagriculture.net/primer.php.

"This is only the beginning," said Kathy Lawrence, National Campaign executive director. "We're looking to refine and regularly update this federal program primer, and will be adding more programs in the coming weeks. We'll also be developing more in-depth fact sheets for selected programs."

Draft Horses The Draw At Annual Sale

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Auctioneers dropped the gavel on draft horses and Haflingers during an annual sale at the State Farm Show Complex, January 22 and 23.

Dale Stoltzfus, secretary of the Pennsylvania Draft Horse Sale, reported that this year's sale reflected some of the trends of the horse market in general.

While the better bred horses commanded top prices, average stock was more of a bargain, according to Stoltzfus.

In the Belgian portion of the sale the top was a mare consigned by Amos Beiler Jr., Gap, and purchased by Raymond Lantz, New Holland, for $8,100.

The top gelding was consigned by Isaac Swarey, Rosedale, Mich., and purchased by Sassman Brothers, Iowa, for $6,200.

The top Belgian stallion was consigned by Floyd Bontrager of Middlebury Ind. and purchased by Jean Spako, Albany, for $4,950.

The top Percheron gelding was consigned by Stoney Hill Percherons, Millersburg, Ohio, and purchased by Otto Waibel, Balgach, Switzerland, for $6,700.

Stoney Hill Percherons also consigned the top Percheron mare, which was purchased by Gary Sweetser, Garfield, Maine, for $5,000.

The top Percheron stallion was consigned by Janice Ruhl and Rueben Dourte, Manhiem, and purchased by Stephen Burkholder, Fleetwood, for $5,900.

A 2-year-old black and white spotted stallion was consigned by Mahlon Coblentz of Belle Center, Ohio and purchased by Kelly O'Conner of Peck, Mich., for $5,100.

A pair of Standardbred/Percheron crossbred mares consigned by Jim Ferguson, Upland Ind., were purchased by Elmer Yoder of Hartley Del., for $2,500 each.

The Haflinger division of the sale was very well attended and supported again this year, according to Stoltzfus. As in the draft portion, averages were down a bit from last year, but still ahead of some previous years and the tops were higher than ever.

The committee reports that mares averaged $2,060, stallions averaged $2,345, and geldings averaged $1,405.

Twenty-four head of Haflingers sold for $3,000 and up. Eleven head sold for $5,000 and up and two head sold for $10,000 and up.

A 2-year-old stallion consigned by Jodi Winkler, Creston, Ohio, sold for $10,700 to Lavern Schlabach of Tuscola, Ill.

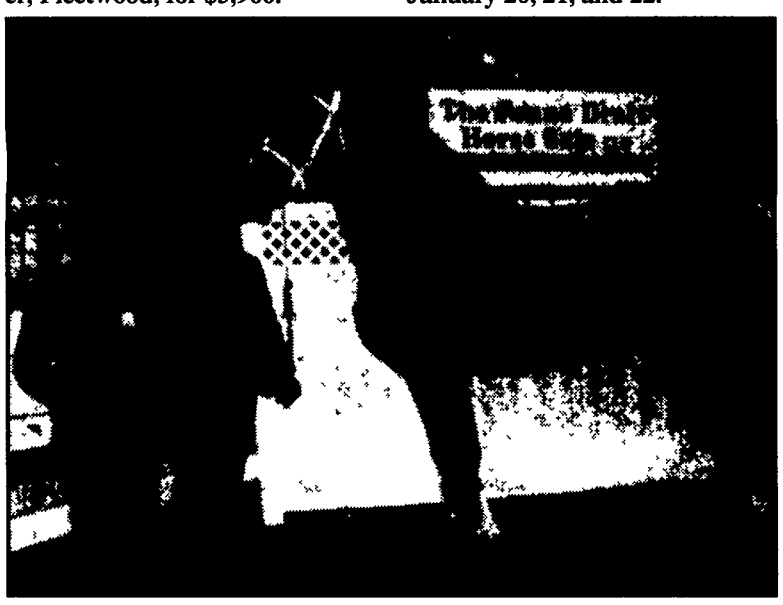
A 7-year-old bred mare consigned by Bunker Hill Farm, Millersburg, Ohio, was purchased by David Marshall, Newark Del., for the University of Delaware for $10,000. This mare was one of four purchased by Dr. Marshall for use in the equine program at the University.

The sale dates for 2004 will be January 20, 21, and 22.

Recently-sold "Cody" stands approximately 20 hands high and weighs between 2,400-2,500 pounds. Jeff Spako, New Albany, Sullivan County, purchased Cody as a pulling prospect and for stud service. Spako and his wife have a seven-acre operation at home that houses seven Belgian horses. Last year the Spako couple purchased Cody's half brother at the same sale.

A Belgian goes through the ring during the sale.

As Belgians were auctioned off in the Large Arena, owners exhibited their Haflingers — hitched or ridden — to prospective bidders in the northwest barn.



Alfred Geisinger, left, from Austria, and Otto Waibel, a farrier from Switzerland, traveled to take the opportunity to purchase America's larger, freer-moving stock, according to Waibel.

Preparations also include putting a gel-like substance on the filly's mane to keep it from looking too flyaway.

Darrel and Devon Miller, New Paris, Ind., prepare Turkey Creek Princess for the sale ring.

This pile of harnesses was for sale by Orchard Hill Products, owned by Walter Stauffer, Mount Pleasant Mills, during the event.

Charles Breaks Harvest Barrier

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Eric Charles, Lancaster, right, broke the harvest barrier for mechanical harvest of tomatoes when he collected 873.6 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods on 15.9 acres for a 54.9-tons-per-acre average yield. Since 1989, James Kohl, vice president, Furman Foods, left, has offered growers a crisp $100 bill to anyone who could break the 50-bushel-per-acre harvest barrier, which he presented Thursday afternoon to Eric. More about the harvest results and other winners is scheduled for the March 8 issue of Lancaster Farming Grower & Marketer. Photo by Andy Andrews, editor

January Class I Milk Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) has announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for January Class I milk (beverage) as an average of $14.46 in the western areas of the commonwealth, and an average of $14.95 in the central and eastern areas of the commonwealth. These prices include the over-order premium of $1.50 per one hundred pounds of milk.

Farmers, whose milk production is pooled under a federal order, will receive a marketwide blend price based upon the value of all classes of milk. However, the blend price received will vary as the component composition of a farmer's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

and Deb Smith, Biglerville, along with their daughter Delani. They are the owner/operators of Smithfield farm.

A major commodity for the Smiths is the hay business, but they also raise other crops, in addition to dairy replacement heifers. Smith also sells White Oak bag feed.

Glen and Linda Krall, from the cedar Crest Chapter in the eastern region, won the Outstanding Young Farmer Over 30 Award. The couple own about 230 acres of crop land and lease another 315 acres.

Glen served as the PYFA president for 2002, and Linda served as the eastern region vice president.

Other candidates for the award were John and Linette Landis, from the Middleburg chapter in the north central region. The Landis farm, in Snyder County, consists of 176 owned and 132 rented acres.

They milk 65 Holstein cows. They are joined by their daughter Keisha.

Barry Oswald, assistant director in the Department of Education's Bureau of Career and Technical Education, won the 2003 Honorary Young Farmer Award.

Oswald has served as an agricultural teacher and local FFA and adult PYFA chapter adviser, besides working as a field consultant in vocational-technical education for several counties.

Paul and Thelma Kemerer, western region, were awarded the 2003 Richard Hoppes Memorial Award. The award was given by Grace Hoppes, who chose their couple for the mentoring role they played in her life. The Kemerers, from Latrobe, Westmoreland County, own Sunrise Farm, where their grandson milks Brown Swiss cows. They are members of the Kutztown Chapter.

Also during the evening, new president David Groff, Ephrata, left, accepted the gavel from Glen Krall, outgoing Pennsylvania Young Farmer president, representing the change in leadership for the coming year.

Groff challenged the group to a 10 percent increase in membership in the next year.

The Solanco Chapter will host next year's convention, slated for Feb. 3-5 2004 at Willow Valley Conference Center.

Brian Kreider, standing center, Cedar Crest Chapter, eastern region, won the Outstanding Young Farmer Under 30 Award. At far left, Jeffrey McClellan, PYFA north central regional vice president, presented the award. Standing beside McClellan are applicants Howard and Sandy Reyburn, Solanco Young Farmer Chapter, eastern region. From the Gettysburg chapter, south central region, are Chris and Deb Smith, Biglerville.

At right Glen and Linda Krall, from the Cedar Crest Chapter, were awarded the Outstanding Young Farmer Over 30 Award. Also pictured are Middleburg Chapter members John and Linette Landis and their daughter Keisha. Joining them is Paul Kemerer, vice president, at left.

When Glenn Gockley of Mohnton, Lancaster Co., built his 42' x 19' Slurrystore® in 1986, he was milking 50 cows. Little did he know that he would be thankful for the Slurrystore's expandability feature in 2002, when he and son Lamar would double the size of the herd and raise the Slurrystore to 33' high. Thanks and congratulations, Glenn and Lamar!

Chocolate Cream Crepes

Fancy, frilly Valentine's Day greeting cards

Make Valentine's Day special by serving chocolate-covered cherries.

Almost everyone loves chocolate and strawberries. Combine the two, and you're sure to find a spot in your sweetheart's thoughts.

This recipe is a tried and true winner from cooking expert Shirley Orfanella, Quarryville.

See page B2 for more Valentine recipes straight from the kitchen to the heart.

CHOCOLATE-COVERED CHERRIES

4 jars (16-ounces each) maraschino cherries with stems
¼ cup dark rum or cherry juice
Fondant:
1 can sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons light corn syrup
½ teaspoon almond extract
8 cups confectioners' sugar
1½ pounds coating chocolate wafers

Remove 1 tablespoon cherry juice from each jar and add 1 tablespoon rum. Cover and let stand four hours or more to flavor.

Drain cherries in colander, place on paper towels until dry. It is very important to make sure the cherries are dry. Mix milk, extract, and corn syrup. Gradually stir in confectioners' sugar. Work mixture with your hands to get a smooth fondant. Line a cookie sheet with waxed paper. Place a rounded teaspoon of fondant in your hand. Press into two 2-inch circle (in your hand). Place a dried cherry in the center and wrap around cherry — leaving stem exposed. Place on cookie sheet. Refrigerate two or more hours until fondant is firm. Melt chocolate. Carefully dip each cherry and set on waxed paper until set. Do not refrigerate after dipping as cherries will weep.

Allow a week for fondant to liquefy or use as is (I do). Makes approximately 96.

What's Up With The Food Guide Pyramid?

The Food Guide Pyramid for Americans has been receiving a lot of criticism lately. When the pyramid was introduced in 1992, it had already been recalled and retooled. However, it was the first food guide in the United States to address the swelling research linking diet to disease by ranking the food groups.

The "Basic Four" Food Groups Guide had first been introduced in 1958 and although other guides came and went, the simplicity of the Basic Four recommendations made it hard to replace.

While it appears that diet recommendations come and go with the wind, most are based on extensive research with large populations. The prevalence of heart disease and its high morbidity rate in Americans was the focus when the pyramid was introduced. At that time, high fat intake was linked to high cholesterol levels and increased risk for heart disease. High fat intake was also linked to certain types of cancer and obesity.

It was observed that most populations, including Americans take in most of their calories from carbohydrates — which include the grain group at the bottom of the pyramid and the fruits and vegetables. Populations who base their diets on grain intake such as Asians, Africans and others have not been seen to exhibit the same rates of heart disease and obesity.

Because carbohydrates contain less than half the calories as fats, it appeared that the substitution of equal fat intake with carbohydrates would lessen calories taken in and let a person lose weight or eat more.

From these recommendations arose the explosion of bagels, pasta and low fat versions of a myriad of foods during the last 10 years. Careful label reading reveals that some of these foods, while lower in fat, are not lower in calories. This simplistic approach to weight loss misled many to overeat carbohydrates and disregard portions, leading us to the present epidemic of obesity in the United States.

Many of the food guide pyramid critics feel that the lowest group on the pyramid, the cereals, grains and pasta, should be replaced with the fruit and vegetable tier. Extremists such as those Atkins Diet zealots, have even suggested that the Meat, Fish and Protein group be the base of the pyramid. Many physicians are skeptical of advocating this diet which restricts carbohydrates to less than 20 percent of calories (present recommendations call for 50-60 percent of total calories eaten).

Carbohydrates are the sole fuel for the brain and nervous system. Until recently, no formal research had tested the Atkins diet but the latest research presented by Eric Westman, an internist at Duke pitted the Atkins diet against the American Heart Association Step 1 diet, a widely used low-fat approach. Results for the 120 participants showed greater weight loss (31 pounds versus 20) and improvement of some blood lipid values over six months. Research involving greater numbers and longer periods of time are examining this subject further.

Not everyone needs to lose weight and research in essential nutrients done in the 19th and 20th centuries has taught us that we need a variety of foods in our diet each day to avoid nutritional deficiencies and diseases. Eating the pyramid way will meet these needs.

The food guide pyramid is presently being reviewed by those who created it — the United States Department of Agriculture, Human Nutrition Information Service.

Comments are being accepted from the public. If you would like to express your opinion regarding how a revised pyramid might appear, contact Carole Davis (Carole.Davis@cnpp.usda.gov) at the Center for Nutrition Policy and Promotion.

Ten Indicators of a Healthy Marriage

COLUMBUS, Ohio—A strong, healthy marriage isn't a matter of luck or romance, says Ted Futris, family life specialist for Ohio State University Extension. It takes work and compatibility.

"Some factors that contribute to a healthy relationship are static—they're things you can't really change," Futris said. "Others are things that are dynamic—things that you can work on to improve your relationship." Either way, they're important to know for anyone who is married or is thinking of marriage, he said.

Marriage Week USA is Feb. 7-14, and Futris hopes couples will take some time during that week to improve their relationship. Futris, a founding member of the Columbus Marriage Coalition, shares 10 indicators of a good relationship:

•Fostering good communication. Happy couples talk to each other, and they listen to each other. The best communicators recognize when outside distractions or emotional states are at work to prevent good communication, and find ways to work through them when both partners are ready.

•Resolving conflict in a positive way. According to the Coalition for Marriage, Family and Couples Education, habitual avoidance of conflict is the No. 1 predictor of divorce. Strong relationships are earmarked by a couple's ability to handle disagreements in a positive manner.

•Having realistic expectations. When people first meet, they put their best foot forward and try to mask their flaws. This is normal, but couples should realize that as time goes on, the "real" person will emerge. Relationships develop over time, but unrealistic expectations of a partner, or of a relationship, can cause undue stress.

•Paying attention to details of your partner's life. People in strong marriages know their partner well. They know major events in their partner's past, and they know each other's likes, dislikes, hopes and worries. And, they keep updating this information as their partner's world changes.

•Experiencing more positive interactions than negative ones. Some research indicates that successful marriages have five times as many positive interactions as negative ones. Giving positive responses to a partner's bid for attention—whether it's a question, an extended hand, or just a glance—strengthens the relationship.

•Building trust. Trust develops slowly, but it is fostered by communicating honestly and following through on promises.

•Spending time together. Sharing experiences is a good way to build a relationship. Couples who enjoy doing things together—rather than feeling obligated or forced into doing things together—have a stronger, healthier relationship.

•Shared values. Couples who start out with a wide array of shared values—who agree on what's important in lifehave a better chance at building a solid relationship.

•Shared responsibilities. Both partners have the obligation of nurturing the relationship, keeping the household running smoothly and working toward common goals. Allowing only half of the couple to bear the brunt of these responsibilities can cause resentment to build.

•Adapting to change. People and relationships change over time. That's to be expected, not feared. Even people's expectations of a relationship can change. Partners need to be able to talk about these changes and find ways to adapt to them.

These are just some indicators of healthy relationships, Futris said. On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

'Bout halfway, we are.

And closin' in.

Time flies fast enough, without wishing—outwardly or inwardly—for it to go any faster. Still, a brief thought pops up increasingly through conversations with folks: "I'm ready for spring!"

Given the layers and pounds of outer gear necessary to tackle barn work as the temperatures flirted with zero in recent weeks, daydreaming about warm, sunny days and soft breezes comes pretty easily. Thoughts of shorts, t-shirts and a wave-washed beach offer mental allure while piling on thermal coveralls, turtleneck sweaters, hooded sweatshirts, wear) and a ski cap guaranteed to style an incurable case of "hat hair."

We have the breezes, albeit far from balmy. They rattle the maple limbs overhead, shake the big doors on the old bank barn, whistle through the fans at the calf nursery and poke through cracks around the windows of our old farmhouse, assuring that we never suffer with indoor stale air problems. But the sunshine has been pretty sparse, probably off wintering somewhere in the sunny Carribean.

Looking beyond the repeated blankets—thick and thin—of snow cover, and assorted build-ups of ice, diminished last weekend by foggy drips, offers cause for hope.

There are some signs of spring out there.

First, of course, came the seed catalogs, the initial offering in the mail arriving barely after Thanksgiving. Poor timing, all you garden catalog mailers. Who has time to think seeds in those hectic weeks just before the holidays? Those catalogs just get buried in the deluge holiday and pre-tax-time mail. Fortunately, they get dug out of the paper work piles just about the time that springtime longing starts to peak.

And what better way to spend a minus-10-degree-wind-chill wintry evening than curled up under a snuggly afghan with popcorn, hot chocolate and a couple of springtime wishbooks? No weeds, no worms, no wasps. Just a perfect garden with perfectly straight rows of picture-perfect produce.

Dandelions already greening up under the damp leaf cover offer a reality check to that.

Blooming on the window sill behind the kitchen sink is something closer to the real thing. A pot of tall paperwhite narcissus, their clusters of white blossoms wafting out a wonderful fragrance. The coolness of the windowsill has extended the duration of the dainty flowers, flanked by a perky geranium sporting soft pink flower heads and white cyclamen blossoms poking up from crisp, heart-shaped foliage.

On another windowsil, pussywillow branches have pushed out pale green shoots of foliage above stems covered with kitten-soft, gray flower buds. For years, the nicest stems on the old pussywillow eluded cutting, taunting us bouquet-cutters from some 20 feet overhead. Until December's first nasty ice storm.

Stretched out in the yard on its side, rotten-hollow trunk exposed, the pussywillow's bud-laden top branches were easy prey for the pruning shears. Now they hint of the growing season, forming white roots and green tops. Even in death, this old tree which harbored annual nests of our backyard birds has given up new life to replace its former self.

Two large cardboard boxes wintered on the basement porch until late last month, when plummeting temperatures sent me hustling to move them to the ground cellar. Buried inside their stuffing of leaf-insulation are pots filled with tulip, daffodil and hyacinth bulbs, growing roots and shoots for forcing. As signs of growth begin to show, they'll be moved to the cool floor of the greenhouse in a couple of weeks. With a late-April Easter date, a few of the pots may need stalling longer than usual in the cool darkness.

Glancing out the kitchen window a few days ago, I spied a strange cat pussyfooting around the yard. From its size and build, the stocky, fuzzy-gray feline was obviously a male. Recent episodes of screaming, screeching and yowling, sometimes setting Derra Dog off into a frenzy of barking and a chase of the instigators, signals yet another sign of the sliding by of the season—tomcat territorial squabblings.

Take heart.

When the catfights start, spring is truly not very far away.

Dish Gardens Inject 'Green' Into Drab Winter Season

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — "Bring green into your lives in this gray and white winter," said Master Gardener Sandy Gipe.

Gipe taught a recent hands-on class at the Lebanon Valley Ag Center on dish gardening.

Instead of putting plants in separate pots, several plants with varying colors, textures, and with similar light and watering requirements were placed in one container to create an interesting plant design. Dish gardens can be placed on tables, mantles, and other spots throughout your home to add color and beauty.

Workshop participants created dish gardens filled with palm, peperomia, asparagus fern, marble-queen pothos, polka dot, and primrose plants.

Other plants can be substituted, but for best results, Gipe recommends plants that require medium light, average moisture, and are slow growing. Select plants grown in 2¼-2½-inch pots from a reputable garden center.

"Read labels carefully," Gipe recommends. Choose those requiring similar growing conditions.

Keep plants in scale with one another. No plant should be so tall that it dwarfs other plants. Use plants with heights ranging from 2-12 inches. The tallest plant can be three or four times larger but can be kept to scale if occasionally pinched or pruned.

Dish gardens are not permanent arrangements, but most plants can remain in the container for one year. If they become overwhelmingly large, the plants should be transplanted.

Containers

Almost any type of container will work, but shallow containers from 2-4 inches are recommended. Do not use containers that are more than 8-10 inches tall.

Gipe said dish containers do not need drainage holes. Watering can be controlled by checking soil moisture content by inserting a finger. Soil should be slightly dry to the touch before watering. Too frequent watering may stimulate excessive growth and cause the plant to outgrow container.

Gipe prefers using plastic inserts in baskets.

Soil

Use any good grade soil recommended for indoor plants. Soil should be slightly moist for planting. If soil is very dry, moisten with water. Put a layer of soil in container.

Create Design

Keep arrangement in balance. Try not to make it top-heavy or have more weight in plants on one side of the container. Before permanently setting any plants in the container, remove plants from the pots without disturbing the root ball and set on top of soil. Shift the plant from one spot to another until you have the design you like.

Plant, Water

Scoop hole into soil using your finger until large enough to insert plant and pack soil around roots. The soil line should be about ¼-inch down from the rim of the container to allow for watering. Keep crowns of plants slightly above soil line. Cover the soil with green moss or Spanish moss if desired.

"If plant is turning yellow, it has been watered too much. If it is brown, it hasn't been watered enough," Gipe said of determining watering needs.

Light

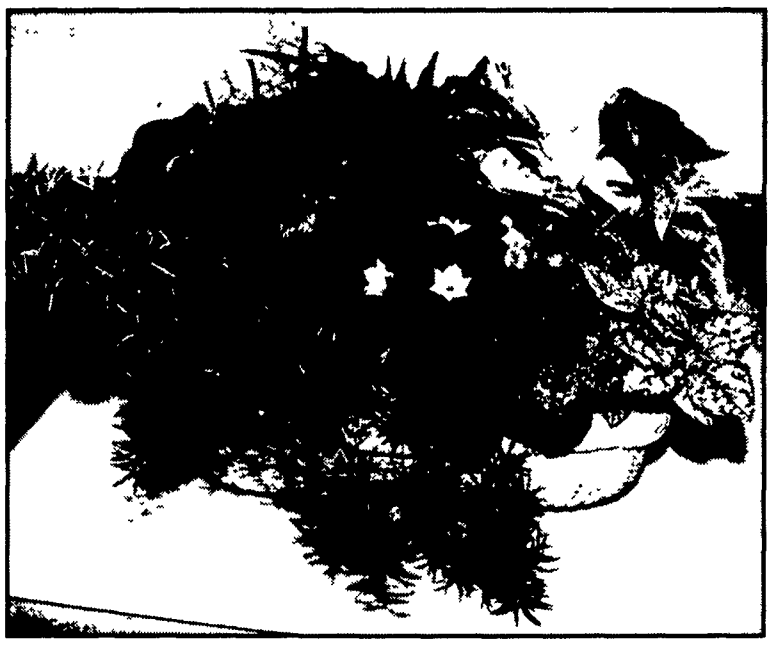
Gipe recommends selecting plants that prefer medium light, but other types can be planted. The nice thing about container gardening is that the container can be moved from place to place if more or less sun is needed.

Gipe suggests adding a blooming plant for color. She especially recommends primroses. After the primrose is planted in the dish and is no longer blooming, plant outside. Primroses can handle fairly cold weather and can be planted outside before most plants. Primroses will grow and multiply in outside soil.

Several different types of dish gardens can be planted. These include the following:

- Woodland: Use plants collected from the wild such as mountain laurel, wintergreen, ferns, club moss, seedling yews, firs, pine, and hemlock.
- Field and meadow: Use hawkweed, pussytoes, wild strawberry, lichens, mosses, juniper seedlings, grasses, fungi, and fern. These often require more care and high light.
- Tropical: This is the dish garden Gipe recommends. In addition to the plant varieties used at the workshop, other plants recommended are philodendron, English ivy, grape ivy, snake plant, pothos, wandering Jew, corton, dracaena, bromelia, ti, Chinese evergreen, pittosporum, and neanthe bella palm.
- Desert garden: Use cactus specimens that have shallow roots and rarely need watering. Some varieties require bright light and others low light, so be sure to combine compatible cacti.

For more information about indoor gardening, contact your county extension office.



Dish gardens require shallow containers and plants with the same light and watering requirements.

"Dish gardens are easy to make and care for," said Sandy Gipe, who taught a class recently at the Lebanon Valley Ag Center.

Philadelphia Flower Show Is March 2-9

PHILADELPHIA—The Philadelphia Flower Show March 2-9 in Philadelphia will bloom with flambojan trees, passion flowers and a host of exotic flora, setting the stage for the year's newest and most imaginative landscape and floral designs.

Three "Central Feature" exhibits, covering more than 11,000 square feet, depict the show's Latin theme.

This festival of flowers flows throughout the main exhibition halls as more than 50 national and international florists, landscapers, nonprofit organizations, and educational institutions compete for "Best In Show" by presenting their fantastic, larger-than-life visions to hundreds of thousands of visitors in the world's largest indoor flower show. Hundreds of Artistic and Horticultural "classes" showcase thousands of prized entries by individuals and gardening groups as they flaunt their flowers, plants, and topiaries all primped to perfection. Any and all are encouraged to enter this amateur division of the show by contacting the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for an Exhibitor Guide or by visiting www.theflowershow.com.

Outstanding events and learning opportunities are offered daily for show visitors. Lectures and demonstrations are held hourly and feature celebrity gardeners and authors who present the newest trends in garden design and flower arranging. New in 2003, Fine Gardening Day will take place Saturday, March 8. Presented by Fine Gardening Magazine, the day will feature extraordinary experts from across the nation who will lecture on a series of gardening topics for beginners to experts. In addition, world-renowned Maesterflorist, Gregor Lersch will offer exclusive reservation-only design presentations on Wednesday, March 5. For Gregor Lersch reservation information, visit www.theflowershow.com or call (215) 988-8879.

For the gardener cook, the culinary artistry of celebrity chefs is presented twice daily at the show. The free events are hosted by Chef Joseph E. Shilling, Dean of the Art Institute of New York City. A complete schedule can be accessed online at www.theflowershow.com.

The very popular Garden Tea is offered daily at the Show as an elegant respite from the day's activities. This reservation only event returns for its fifth year and has proven to be a relaxing and sophisticated setting amid the excitement of the show. An all new menu of crumpets, cakes, petit sandwiches, and a selection of fine teas are just a few of the items in 2003's tasty spread. For information and reservations call (215) 988-8879 or reserve online at www.theflowershow.com.

The show is an inspiration for gardeners and shoppers alike. The Flower Show Marketplace features over 140 national and international vendors, offering top-of-the-line garden tools, accessories, furniture, supplies and gifts. A favorite stop is the "Flower Show Shoppe" where exquisite floral items and show keepsakes can be found.

Tickets at the box office are $24 for adults on opening Sunday (March 2), $22 on other weekend days and $20 on weekdays. Children ages 2-12 are $10 (good any day). Advance purchase tickets are $18 and are available at SEPTA outlets, PNC Bank branches, AAA Mid-Atlantic, Acme Markets, Clemens Markets, Eckerds, Smith & Hawken, Philadelphia-area Borders Books, participating florists and nurseries and online at www.theflowershow.com. Group tickets (20 or more) are $17.50 and are good any day. Group order forms are available online at www.theflowershow.com or by calling (215) 988-8839.

ANSWER — In answer to Nina Biddle's question on why identical recipes taste different when prepared with different brands of flour, Jean Nestler, Halifax, writes, the wheat for the flours are grown in different parts of the country. There are many different wheat varieties just like there are different varieties of apples, tomatoes, and oranges. Jean said she learned this in her home economics high school class in the 1940s. She prefers Gold Medal unbleached flour but otherwise uses products made by Pillsbury.

ANSWER — Emma Sue Martin, New Holland, writes that she makes butter in a blender, but only a small amount can be made at a time; otherwise the blender motor may burn out. She has had success using blenders made by Osterizer and Hamilton Beach.

Blender Butter

Put in blender:
1 cup cold water
2 cups thick sweet cream

Blend on highest setting until butter forms (the blender will sound different at this point. After making butter several times, you will recognize the different points).

Turn blender off. Pour contents into large bowl.

Use 1 cup buttermilk that is on the bottom of the blender to add the next 2 cups cream, omitting water.

After cream is blended, work butter together by hand. When buttermilk is worked out, add 1 rounded teaspoon salt to 1 pound butter. Salt may be omitted but the butter will not stay sweet as long.

ANSWER — Esther Sheaffer, Kirkwood, requested a recipe to make good meatballs. Thanks to Emma Martin, New Holland, for sending a good recipe.

3 tablespoons vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Bake meatballs at 350 degrees for one hour.

ANSWER — A Narvon reader wrote that she accidentally discarded two recipes, which she had clipped from this column, that her family really liked. Thanks to Edna Snyder, Woodbury, for answering both requests.

Waffles

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons melted butter
2 eggs
1½ cups milk

Put dry ingredients into bowl, beat eggs, and add milk. Combine with flour mixture. Add melted butter and beat again. Pour into preheated waffle maker.

Flaky Biscuits

2 cups sifted unbleached flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ cup butter, chilled
¾ cup milk, room temperature

Sift together into large mixing bowl: flour, baking powder, sugar, salt, and cream of tartar. Cut in butter until bits of butter are the size of medium peas. Mix in milk only until ingredients are blended. Do not over mix.

Form into a ball; pat out on floured board to ¾-inch thickness. Cut into biscuit shapes using a 2½-inch biscuit cutter. Place on ungreased cookie sheet or in 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Bake at 475 degrees for 10 minutes or until golden brown. Yields: 10 biscuits.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We've had snow again. As my car is parked outside it has to be cleaned off quite often. Of course, we have a two-car garage, but one part is needed to store other things. When the lock on the door freezes, that is just another reason to wish for warmer weather.

The other night we were invited to a taffy pull. I'd never been to one before but I often heard of it. The Amish neighbors started with two large kettles on the stove which had to be stirred continually. When the correct thickness was reached, it was removed from the stove, and the mass was cooled until it could be pulled. And I do mean pulled. The young men stood about five or six feet apart and did what appeared to be a complicated procedure as they exchanged long strings of candy. I was encouraged to butter my hands and try it too. But, I did not do too well and ended up with too much candy on my hands.

The whole group gathered around the table to cut the candy in pieces with a scissors and then wrap each individual piece. They flavored it with spearmint and peppermint. Everyone got to take some home.

Recently, we saw a travelogus on Egypt, and I'm not sorry that I never got to visit it. We were shown sand and more sand with lots of camels. They are mostly raised for meat. There were many pyramids and ancient grave sites too.

My grandchildren went tubing. Now I thought that was sitting in an inner tube and floating down a stream. But, this was using a tube to go down a big snow-covered hill in York County. I've got to keep up with the times.

Apply For Dairy Of Distinction Award By April 15

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15.

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry. Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm.

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Roadside judging will take place in May. Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lanes; and well-maintained fences. They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals,the barnyard, feed areas and manure management.

Winning farms will be notified in late June. Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at HYPERLINKmail to: MOConnor@psu.edu.

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 700 dairy farms. The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont. Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit the farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1 The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Committee (NEDFBP)

2. The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. NEDFBP suggests that a wood post 4" x 4" x 12' or iron pipe 2" x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post In addition, NEDFBP suggests that the sign be mounted in a frame to provide additional stability

3 The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.

4. Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.

5. Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee.

6. No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses.

7 The judges' decision will be final

8 Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31

9. Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign

10 Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee

Dairy of Distinction

Cows Talk About The Day They Left The Barn

KATRINA ORMSBY
Farmer's Wife

ALEXANDRIA (Huntingdon Co.) — It was cold and wet the day the cows left the barn.

It was Edith who discovered the gate at the entrance to the barn unlatched.

"Hey Gertrude!" cried Edith. "The gate at the entrance here doesn't look like it's been shut right."

"Well, push on it for goodness sakes!" said Gertrude disgustingly.

So, Edith pushed on the gate and it slowly swung open.

"Yahoo!" yelled Edith.

"Now what do we do?" Lydia asked.

"We leave stupid!" snapped Gertrude.

"Where exactly do you suggest we go?" Lydia snapped back.

"We go outside!" said Gertrude excitedly.

"Who's coming with me?"

"I am!" said Sophie.

"I will!" cheered Bertha.

And then, faster than two shakes of a calf's tail, all 70 cows were out of the barn. Cows went everywhere! There were cows running down the lane, there were cows galloping in the fields, there were cows playing behind the barn, there were cows laying in the yard, there were even cows eating corn silage in the silage trenches.

"Yippee! This is fun!" cried Edith.

"Yahoo!" bellowed Lydia.

Well, it didn't take long for the farmer's wife to hear all the noise and walk outside to see what was happening.

"Oh No!" cried the farmer's wife. "All the cows in the old freestall barn are out! What am I going to do?" she wailed. Then the farmer's wife went back into the house.

"Ha Ha!" laughed Gertrude. "With the farmer and hired men gone, the farmer's wife will never be able to catch all of us by herself!"

Meanwhile, the farmer's wife was in the house calling neighbors and friends to come help her round up all the cows. Once she finished making some phone calls, she went back outside to look at the problem she had to fix.

"Come on girls," said the farmer's wife as she chased a couple of cows back up the lane.

"She's no fun," wined Lydia in mid-stride.

"I know," Bertha whimpered. As the rain started coming down harder, a few of the cows voluntarily went back into the barn.

Just then the farmer's wife saw her friends driving up the lane. "Thank goodness," she thought to herself.

"Ahhh man! The farmer's wife went and got reinforcements!" huffed Gertrude.

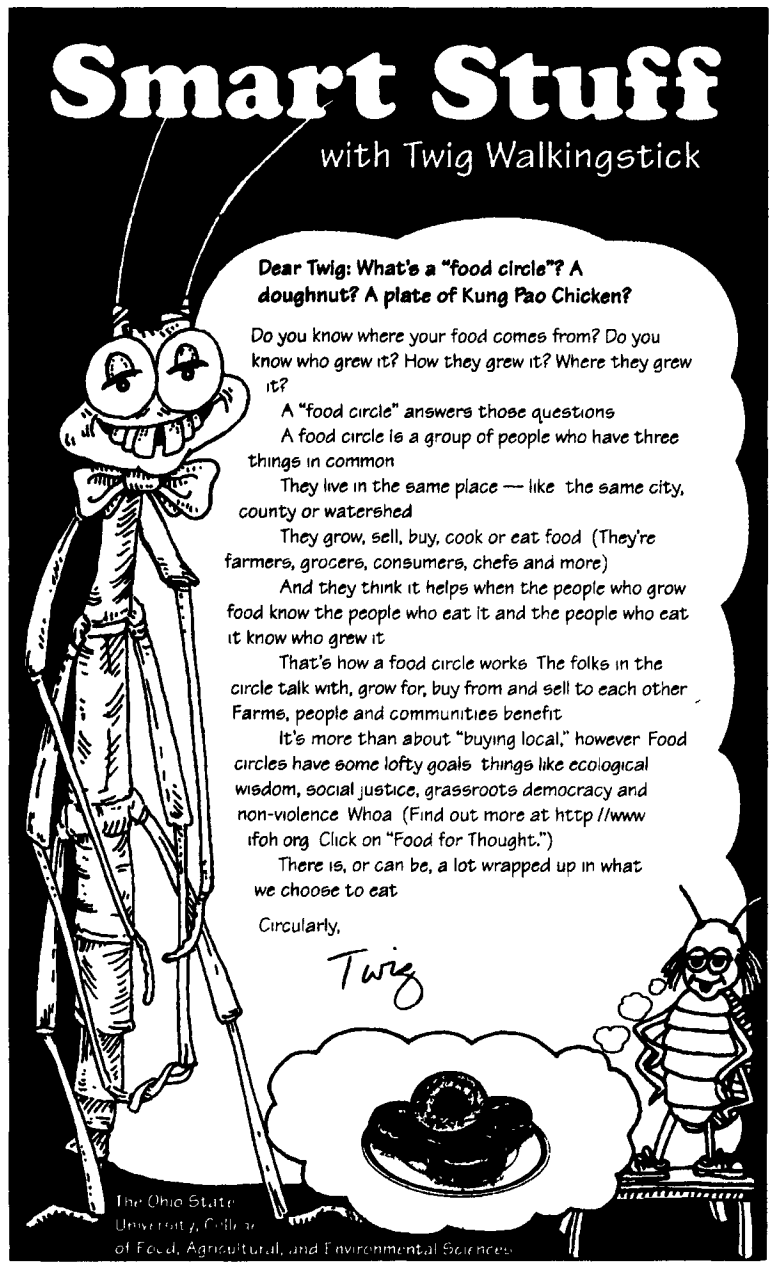
"Oh, it was fun while it lasted," said Sophie.

"We might as well give up and head back to the barn. It's getting too cold out here anyway."

The farmer's wife and her friends herded all the cows together and slowly walked them back into the entrance of the barn and shut the gate tight.

The farmer's wife quickly said thank you to her friends and headed into the house.

"Well, that was fun," chimed Bertha while chewing on some hay. "Yes, it was," said Sophie. "Maybe next time we can stay out a little longer," sneered Gertrude with a smile.



Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: What's a "food circle"? A doughnut? A plate of Kung Pao Chicken?
Do you know where your food comes from? Do you know who grew it? How they grew it? Where they grew it?
A "food circle" answers those questions
A food circle is a group of people who have three things in common
They live in the same place — like the same city, county or watershed
They grow, sell, buy, cook or eat food (They're farmers, grocers, consumers, chefs and more)
And they think it helps when the people who grow food know the people who eat it and the people who eat it know who grew it
That's how a food circle works The folks in the circle talk with, grow for, buy from and sell to each other Farms, people and communities benefit
It's more than about "buying local," however Food circles have some lofty goals things like ecological wisdom, social justice, grassroots democracy and non-violence Whoa (Find out more at http //www ifoh org Click on "Food for Thought.")
There is, or can be, a lot wrapped up in what we choose to eat

Buzz On Pollination

WOOSTER, Ohio — One message that Ohio State University entomologist Jim Tew hopes to drive home is "know your bees."

The bee specialist, who conducts research at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC), said that bee pollination behavior is so intricate and dependent on so many environmental factors that the key to controlling the bee is to know the bee.

"Bees are no doubt vital for pollination. It's an instinctual drive. But bees have their own agenda, their own needs," said Tew. "We've been trying to herd the bee from a state of natural foraging to specific acres of apple, pear or strawberry fields in the hopes that they will take some of their nutrient requirements from our food source. Statistically some will, but there is no way to specifically make bees go to target blooms."

Tew said one thing growers need to realize is that there are other bees that pollinate other than the honey bee, and they should try to take advantage of all bee types that might be available to them.

"Honey bees have long been the primary insects. They are known as generalist pollinators. As soon as apple blooms are full, they move on to the next primary crop," said Tew, adding that Ohio has become the largest honey beekeeper state with over 3,000 beekeepers.

"But the honey bee may not always be the best pollinator. There are other bees, like native bees, bumblebees and the like that are also important pollinators. A grower would want a concert of bees because they pollinate the same flowers, but under different conditions."

For example, Tew describes bumblebees as the "747s of pollinators."

"They can pollinate flowers that honey bees may not be able to get to just because of sheer size," he said. "A flower will most likely be pollinated just by a bumblebee landing on it."

Bumblebees will also pollinate under cool, windy or wet weather conditions, whereas honey bees avoid such changes in the weather. However, unlike honey bees that can pollinate en masse, bumblebees are just beginning life anew at a time when strawberry or peach blooms need to be pollinated.

"Early in the season, you basically have one queen that's pollinating to feed three offspring. Then those three offspring will join her to feed additional offspring. Eventually, populations will be high enough to do some serious pollinating, but by then the season is over," said Tew. "With pollination needed so early in the season, what work can 15 queens do to five-and-a-half acres of apple blooms?"

In addition to bee behavior, environmental changes can also impact whether or not a bee will pollinate a bloom, said Tew.

For example, an early or late bloom may make or break a crop as bloom time and a bee's pollination time may not be in sync. Growers can encourage bees to pollinate their crop by providing nesting sites for native bees (bumblebees, for example, use old mice nests.

Nonfarm Teen Pursues Ag Interests By Choice

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

ANNVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — Lebanon County Dairy Princess Laura Blauch doesn't live on the farm, but that doesn't keep her from being a farm girl. She raises a calf in her back yard and keeps five heifers at her cousin's farm.

"I grew up watching my cousins work with cows on the farm and at shows," Laura said of her fascination with bovine animals.

When she was 10 years old, Laura convinced her parents to let her raise a 4-H calf. That calf is grown now, but each year Laura gets another 4-H calf that she raises in a hutch in the family's backyard in rural Annville. Laura has five heifers that she raises at her cousin's farm.

"I have mostly Brown Swiss, which I love. They are so unique and interesting."

Laura also helps with unloading hay and straw on the farm and with occasional feeding and milking.

"I especially enjoy feeding the cows. My cousins have about 60 head, mostly Holsteins," Laura said.

"It's nice to be able to work on the farm without being tied down to it everyday," she said.

Laura's first introduction to dairy promotion happened when she was in eighth grade. She knew the county dairy princess who asked her to assume the dairy maid role. As a dairy maid, Laura helped with promotions by handing out recipes, cheese, and milk punch samples.

"I enjoyed that experience, so when they ask me to run for dairy princess, I did," she said.

As a 17-year-old senior, Laura contemplated how she could come up with the required speech to convince people to consume more dairy products. In a conversation with her mom, they discussed the fact that many people have misconceptions about the dairy industry. That subject became the basis for Laura's speech. She selected eight common misconceptions and presented the truth.

"It was sort of a last-minute panic," Laura said of polishing the speech to give before a pageant audience and judges.

The speech was well accepted. When she presented the speech at the county level, it helped capitulated her into the position of county princess, which enabled her to advance to state competition. Last September at the state pageant, Laura's speech was one of two selected from all competing county princesses as the most outstanding.

Some of Laura's family members also have ties to the dairy industry. Her dad, Eric, is a feed salesman, and her brother Chris, 15, raises Jersey calves and is a member of the Lebanon County dairy bowl team. Her mom Connie enjoys buying and decorating with farm-related antiques.

Laura was a former member of the 4-H dairy bowl team, but is busy with dairy promotion. Most of the promotions are at the county level, but her favorite was helping at Lancaster County's ice cream fest last July. She escorted the Turkey Hill mascot, handed out cheese sticks to the crowd, and answered curious questions from the nonfarming public.

She said, "Again and again I am asked three questions: 'How old do cows get? Does it hurt cows when cows are milked, and how much does a cow weigh?'"

According to Laura, the oldest cow reached the age of 25 years, but most are much younger. It doesn't hurt the cow when she is milked, and the average cow weighs 1,400 pounds.

Another favorite promotion was a barn party at Terry Shuey's Lebanon County farm. Students from several local schools and a school from New Jersey attended the event. Laura answered questions about cows and help churn homemade ice cream a big hit with the visitors.

Laura also enjoyed visiting the commissioners at the county courthouse, where she handed out cheeseball samples and milk punch to all courthouse visitors.

Lebanon County Dairy Princess Laura Blauch keeps a record of promotional duties. She also won the outstanding speech award at the state pageant competition.

Although she is an accomplished pianist and musician, Laura chooses to pursue history studies at college.

This is the sixth calf Lebanon County Dairy Princess Laura Blauch has raised in her backyard as a 4-H project.

A senior at Annville-Cleona High School, Laura studies physics, calculus, English, writing lab, and speech.

"I'm much more into academics than athletics," she said.

Her high school peers view her status of dairy princess positively. They were excited that she received the state speech award and like to see her at promotions.

"I also participate in every music group the school has," she said. An accomplished pianist, Laura continues lessons she began in second grade.

Although she has the ability to pursue a music career, Laura said that she plans to study history at either Ursinus or Gettysburg College. After graduation, her goal is to enter the Peace Corps and teach in Mongolia, which is north of China, for two years.

She considers her experience as dairy princess as contributing toward that goal. "The dairy princess position has built confidence in me as a public speaker, and will help me with teaching. Also, I've worked with different age groups, which will help me in teaching, and I learned to be knowledgeable in the dairy industry," Laura said.

The threat to world peace and of moving to a remote area near northern China doesn't particularly concern Laura. She said, "I have a lot of faith in God. I can sit here and worry — it doesn't change the situation."

She considers she might as well offer her services in a constructive matter, and is impressed with Peace Corps' contribution to world peace.

Laura helps teach a preschool Sunday school class at her church.

She describes herself as hard working and said that she tends to take on more than she can handle sometimes.

"But I think once you commit yourself to an activity, you should finish what you start and not quit," she said.

Here is Laura's favorite dairy recipe, which her Uncle Bill devised. It is very rich, so the Blauchs only serve it for holiday dinners or special occasions.

UNCLE BILL'S MUSHROOMS WITH SOUR CREAM

- 2 cups chopped onions
- ½ pound butter, divided
- 2 pounds fresh mushrooms, washed, quartered
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 8 ounces sour cream
- ½ cup shredded cheddar cheese

Saute onions in ¼ cup butter in large skillet until soft. Add mushrooms and saute 5 minutes longer. Sprinkle flour, salt and pepper over mushrooms and stir until well blended. Add heavy cream and sour cream. Cook on low until mixture bubbles. Pour into 8-cup shallow casserole dish, sprinkle with cheddar cheese. Drizzle with ¼ cup melted butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until cheese melts and sauce is set. Serves 6-8.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County agents were honored for outstanding service last week at the extension annual meeting.

Chet Hughes, Lancaster extension livestock agent, was honored for 20 years of service by Michelle Rodgers, regional director of cooperative extension. Leon Ressler, extension director, was honored for 15 years of work with cooperative extension.

Staff receiving honors for five or more years of service were Nancy Wiker, Lori Little, and Katina Showman.

The staff was honored at the annual extension meeting, which featured food provided by the county's many commodity organizations. Represented were the Lancaster County dairy producers, poultry industry, fruit growers, pork producers, and other organizations.

Mark Chien, regional wine growing specialist/extension agent, provided information on the wine grape producers in the county and region. Pennsylvania is home to 74 branded wines and more than 100 independent vineyards.

Greg Martin, poultry extension agent, spoke about the outreach program to inner-city schools in the "pizza" program, which examined how a food such as pizza is produced from the farm to the table. For some students, it was the "first time they'd ever seen a greenhouse or handled plants," said Martin. "For some, it was the first time they had been near a cow."

Tim Elkner, horticulture agent, spoke about the Master Gardener Program. He also noted that the statewide sweet corn integrated pest management (IPM) program provides $13 million in economic and environmental benefits to the state. Elkner also reviewed the pumpkin and seedless watermelon variety programs that have proven successful and helpful for many county growers.

Mary Beth Grove, extension agent dairy/environment, noted that "Lancaster County has more dairy cows per square mile than anywhere else in the country." There are 1,840 dairy farms in the county. Grove reviewed the many ways in which Penn State provides tools for the dairy producers. There are 50 organic dairy farms in the county, and many workshops provide ways to help the dairy industry remain profitable. That includes Dairy Day - the county dairy day program hosted 200-300 producers.

Chet Hughes, county livestock agent, spoke about the success of the Pork Quality Assurance (PQA) Program. He noted also the work of the Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) efforts and the Trucker Quality Assurance (TQA) programs well under way in the county. One TQA program included five workshops and involved more than 200 drivers.

Nancy Wiker, family living agent, reviewed various food and nutrition programs, in addition to food safety certification and others. Included was an overview of the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program by Stacey Hutchison.

Katina Showman, 4-H program coordinator, spoke about the benefits of the 4-H program to county youth. She noted that the 4-H Benefit Auction is scheduled for the Farm and Home Center on Saturday, Feb. 22 at 9:30 a.m.

Leon Ressler, extension director, noted the work of two longtime staff members who recently retired: Glenn Shirk, dairy agent, and Susan Smallhoffer, office staff, each with more than 40 years of service. John Yocum, Landisville Research Center, retired in September after more than 40 years of service to Penn State Extension.

Ressler noted that the county generates more than $960 million in farm receipts. One in five jobs in the county are ag-related.

Ressler pointed to the bookmark included with handouts to those who attended the meeting. The bookmark includes a survey for those who rely on extension, addressing different program areas.

In the annual report, there was a listing of 2002 accomplishments. The extension office provided 16,693 different types of individual assistance, with 7,213 types of assistance by volunteers. Extension listed 285 newspaper articles written, 13 radio broadcasts, 10 TV programs, 267 written newsletters, and 81,315 educational publications distributed. There were 1,068 meetings conducted by staff with an attendance of 19,976. The number of Master Gardeners is 62 with a posting of 3,365 Master Gardener volunteer hours.

Glenn Shirk provided some comments about the passing of Jay Irwin, longtime extension agent through the 1980s. Irwin died unexpectedly on July 30 last year.

Said Shirk, "Jay has enriched our lives with so many precious memories. His life was a living testimony of what he taught and believed."

Irwin, who grew up on a dairy farm in Blair County, was graduated from Penn State in 1949 with a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics. After serving with the navy in the South Pacific aboard a submarine during World War II, Irwin managed Farm Bureau cooperatives in western Pennsylvania for 15 years.

In 1967, Irwin and his family moved to Lancaster County, and Lloyd Hess, Hess Barbecue, finds the weather downright tropical at the annual meeting of Lancaster County Extension.

Irwin began his extension career as an agent. He worked closely with the poultry industry. Through the years, Irwin introduced various youth and adult programs and participated in Penn State international programs in Poland, Zimbabwe, and Swaziland.

Irwin wrote the "Now Is The Time" column for Lancaster Farming as extension director beginning in 1981. He retired from extension in 1991.

Irwin was renowned for his work with the poultry industry during the avian influenza crisis of the mid 1980s. He was honored as Pennsylvania's Broiler Industry Man of the Year and received the coveted George C. Delp Award from the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Irwin also was recognized with the Lancaster County Farm Bureau Award, the American Dairy Association's Ag Communicator Award, and the Penn State Master Educator Award for outstanding business and leadership training.

Shirk said, "Jay, you have enriched our lives in so many ways, and we shall continue to remember you by the wonderful legacy you have left with us. Thank you so much!"

Coopering Craft Recalls Somerset County's Unique Heritage

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — Mark Ware of Friedens in Somerset County never imagined that when he decided to learn the cottage craft of coopering years ago, he would someday teach others the dying art form.

In the 19th century, coopering was a very important cottage craft in Somerset County because the maple syrup industry relied primarily upon those wooden buckets, called keelers, to catch the maple sugar water as it dripped from the spile.

Galvanized steel buckets were introduced in the 20th Century and nowadays, mostly plastic tubing is used.

In the past, other wooden vessels were used in the burgeoning maple sugar industry. Many farmers were "jack of all trades" and were able to make the needed wooden items as a sideline to farming. That was no longer the case when Ware was in high school.

"I wanted to learn something that no one else was doing," said Ware, who became involved in the county's historical society while he was in high school and now works as the museum educator for the Somerset Historical Center. "There seemed to be a mystery associated with coopering and how to make keelers. There wasn't much information on the subject so I learned a lot on my own through trial and error."

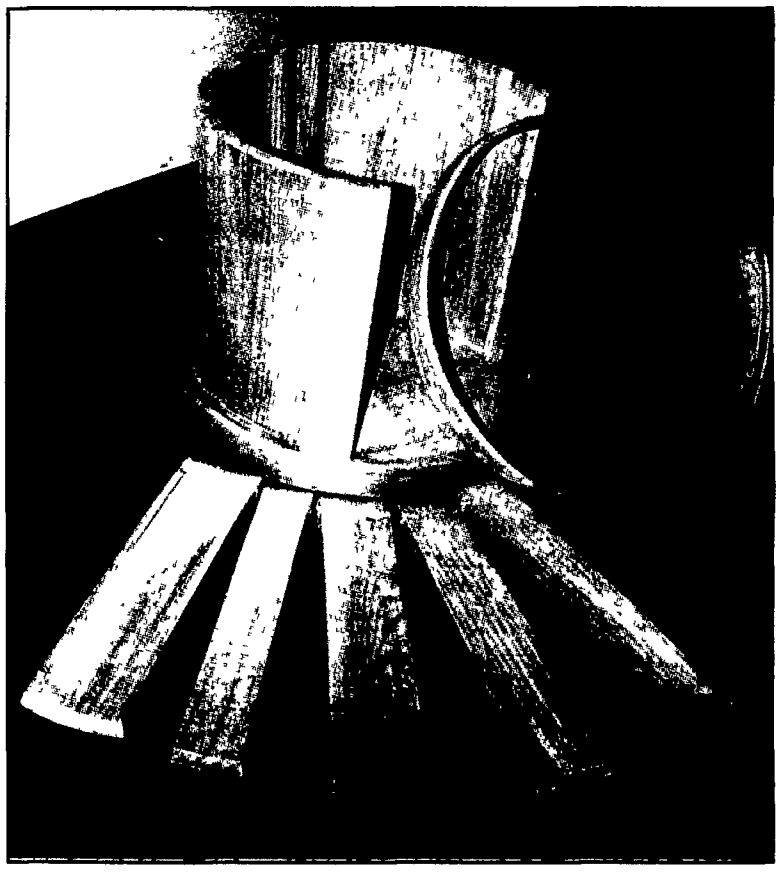
Not only has Ware learned some of the craft through local coopers such as James Johnson, Jim Younkin, Jubel Werner, and Glenn Scott, but he has also studied coopering at Colonial Williamsburg through a Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission enhancement grant. Ware attended workshops at Petersvalley Crafts School in Layton, N.J., where he learned the techniques of coopering as practiced by Alex Stewart, who had been featured in the popular Foxfire books.

These water-tight keelers are constructed without any glue, nails or screws. White pine is usually used for the bucket because of its abundance and its soft texture. White oak is traditionally chosen to make the hoop.

The first step of this "highly-specialized joinery," says Ware, usually consists of splitting a log into small pieces and then shaping the pieces into curved staves, or stakes, that form the sides of the bucket. Then, a round piece of wood is made to fit into the inside surface of the curved staves. From there, hoops are banded together to pull the keeler tight. The sugar water causes the wood to swell and become water-tight.

A simple keeler made during the early 1800s for a few cents now sells for more than $70. The antique keelers still in existence sell from $50 to $150, depending on their condition. Many people buy them as magazine holders or fixtures in their homes.

Mark Ware of Friedens in Somerset County has been practicing his craft of coopering since high school. He teaches a workshop on the craft every spring at the Somerset Historical Center, where he also works as the museum's educator. He is pictured by the museum's interpretive display of the maple industry.



Water-tight wooden buckets made through an art called coopering served a variety of purposes in the 19th Century, including maple sugar keelers, butter churns, water buckets, and washtubs.

After galvanized steel buckets were introduced into the maple sugar industry, the old wooden buckets were usually thrown on heaps and oftentimes burned for kilning wood. The antique vessels that remain in the present day sell from $50 to $150. Here, stored keelers are pictured in this photograph, which is part of the collection at the Somerset Historical Center and on display in the Center's permanent exhibit about farming in Southwestern Pennsylvania. The photograph was taken in the 1960s.

"Many people simply burned the old buckets for kilning wood," said Ware. "They didn't stack well and it was easier to break them up for fire wood."

Some keelers, however, have survived and are found in many homes and some antique shops throughout Somerset County and beyond. Somerset County, one of the leading producers of maple syrup, is known for its maple heritage.

In Somerset County, the word "keeler" comes from the German word "bucket" and was associated with the milk industry. However, in Somerset County alone, the word was applied to a bucket for maple sugar water. The word "spotza" is also a Somerset County heritage term applied to a type of maple delicacy when maple syrup is dropped into ice water and turns into a kind of taffy. Ware believes this term may be associated with the German word "spitzel," which meant a drop noodle.

"Somerset County has long since been known for the maple industry," said Ware. "This has been a big part of our heritage."

Ware passes on that unique heritage to others when he conducts a yearly workshop on coopering every spring at the Somerset Historical Center. Fred Will, a fellow cooper who learned the skill from Ware, helps with the workshop.

"We have had anyone and everyone attend the workshop, from teenagers to grandparents. They are from all different backgrounds. Some may be skilled artisans and some may have never held a tool before, but everyone is serious about this workshop," said Ware. "When everyone leaves, they leave with their keeler that can hold water and the buckets look good."

Due to the amount of wood and the limited amount of tools, the workshop is limited to 10 students annually. More than 30 people are on the waiting list.

"Years ago, I would never have thought I would be teaching a sold-out workshop on coopering but it's something I love to do," said Ware. He also describes his love for the craft bordering on addition.

"Our forefathers here in Somerset County — and in Pennsylvania for that matter — were mainly farmers. But they also were skilled artisans who were able to do a variety of crafts," said Ware. "Coopering is just one of the dying traditions but it was very necessary, especially in the maple industry."

If he has his way, Ware will revive the dying art of coopering, and preserve a bit of Somerset County's sweet maple syrup history.

Currier And Ives: Art For The People

Hard to believe, the Currier and Ives prints that come to shops and auction costing sometimes thousands of dollars, at one time could be had for a few cents. The prints were affordable to just about everyone.

In 1840 Nathaniel Currier, a lithographer, created what was probably the first illustrated newspaper "Extra." To illustrate the fire aboard the steamboat Lexington, a new type of art was born. The "Extra Sun," depicting a realistic drawing of the tragedy that killed hundreds, was reprinted in newspapers across the country. At a time when photography was virtually unknown and reproductions of drawings a time consuming process, Currier began offering prints of important current events. In 1857 he joined forces with James Merritt Ives, a self-trained artist. For 50 years they produced an average of three or four new prints every week.

It was perfect timing. The rapidly growing middle and upper classes were looking for new ways to display their affluence. However, it was the middle and lower income classes where Currier and Ives prints found a ready marked. By the time they closed their doors, they had sold millions of prints in unlimited editions from over 7,000 titles.

Their prints covered a wide range of subjects from the Mexican and Civil Wars to clipper ships, sporting events, and Indian subjects. Some of the most popular subjects were of sulky drivers with trotter horses.

Many important American artists had their works reproduced by Currier and Ives.

Among them Arthur Fitzwilliam Tait. Not as well known was Fanny Palmer, but in the days when it was rare for a woman to be a commercial artist, Palmer became known for her depictions of American scenic and marine prints.

Portraits were the most common subjects. Royalty, stage actresses like Sarah Bernhardt, Presidents and politicians were immortalized.

Considered some of the finest work are the "sentimental portraits." They dealt with love, marriage, farewells, and returns.

Not often seen are the prints for children. Two favorites were "Noah's Ark" and "Robinson Crusoe" and his pets. Among the rarest are the "puzzle pictures." Hidden figures were drawn into the picture. Only six of these are known. One is titled "The Puzzled Fox."

CLUES: In the 1920s-1930s, there was a resurgence of interest in collecting antiques from the 19th century — especially Currier and Ives prints. Despite the vast numbers of Currier and Ives prints produced, many hadn't survived. The demand became stronger than the supply. Restrikes (reproductions) of some of the most popular subjects were made. A jewelers' loup or strong magnifying glass can identify a restrike...as with other types of print restrikes. If it has dots in an overall pattern like on the old comic strips, it's a restrike. The originals were hand-painted on stock prints. While the men (except for Fanny Palmer) were the artists and lithographers, it was women who were the colorists. Prints aren't always signed since often several staff artists worked together on the designs.

Always examine the print out of the frame. Value is less if the print has been cut down to fit a frame. Another problem — Currier and Ives calendars were made and framed in the 1940s. In the frame, the calendar page can be mistaken for a print.

I inherited this six-piece wash bowl set with floral motif, from my mother. It is marked "Stratford-10-H. Alcock Company-Cobridge. Can you give me age and value?

N.B. - Jacksonville, FL

Your washbowl set was made in Cobridge, Staffordshire, England between 1880 and 1910 by Henry Alcock & Co. They specialized in printed earthenware. Similar sets can sell in shops for around $450.

I bought this vase, 17½ inches high at the flea market from a Hungarian. I paid $100 but I'm sure it's worth much more. It is porcelain mounted on an elaborately designed brass base. The handles are brass figures of cherubs. It has a crackle, glaze finish and a raised, swag motif.

Antiques Questions And Answers

you appear to have a piece of Zsolnay, Hungarian porcelain, late 19th century. Since the piece is mounted any signature is hidden. It could be worth several thousand dollars and should be seen by a porcelain expert. Examine under the base for any marks. Take a better photo and send to Andrea Blunck Frost, Continental Porcelain, Wm. Doyle Galleries, 175 East 87th St., New York, NY 10128.

Are cake decorations worth anything? I have the Beatles figures with instruments and records.

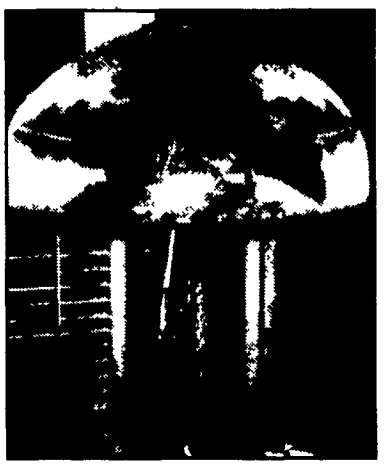
H.F.W. - Sigourney, IA

Not many cake decorations survive. Lucky you! The Beatles as a cake decorating kit can sell for $190 in a shop.

This lamp with the inside, painted glass shade of a landscape has all original parts. It has a metal base. Can't find any markings on it.

L.H. - Lower Burrell, PA

Your table lamp with the dome, reverse painted glass shade is of the type made early 20th century by Philip Handel. It may have had a paper label.



Similar lamps can sell for $3,000 and up in shops.

This plate with floral motif is marked Z.S. & CT, Bavaria. It is a treasured family piece. Can you give an idea of history and value?

J.N. - Staten Island, NY

Your porcelain cake plate was made late 19th century by Zeh, Scherzer. Though charming, it could sell in a shop for $70.

I believe this large blue and white porcelain vase may be of some value. It is eight inches high, 33½ circumference. It is marked but I can't make it out. Information and value appreciated.

J.J. - Lincoln, NE

Your base was made in Germany, probably in the 1850s by the Royal Porcelain Manufactory in Berlin, also known as KPM, according to the marking. The original factory Konigliche Porzellan Manfaktur made pottery from 1823 to 1847. Your piece could sell in a shop for several thousand dollars.

I have a bronze and ivory sculpture of a woman dancing, arms in the air, marked D.H. Chaparus. It belonged to my grandmother who had received it in the 1920s as a wedding gift. Any value?

M.D.S. - Miami Beach, FL

Your early 20th century sculpture could sell for $15,000 to $18,000 at auction.

Farmers Union To Host Annual Convention In California

AURORA, Colo. — Anaheim, Calif., will be the setting for National Farmers Union's 101st anniversary convention, Feb. 28 to March 3, at the West Coast Anaheim Hotel.

"The National Farmers Union convention is a time for members to form the direction for our organization and to encourage each other during this difficult time in rural America following multiple years of natural disasters, low farm income and increased market concentration," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "We are encouraging members to take advantage of the opportunity to include their families in convention activities and to also take time to visit Disneyland or other nearby attractions."

Saturday's activities will include presentations by the Farmers Union Youth Advisory Council. Each of the 10 young people will speak on, "What Farmers Union Means to Me." Following an awards luncheon, the afternoon will be free to explore activities in Anaheim, including Disneyland, just a block from the convention hotel, with discounted tickets available.

Sunday activities will begin with a worship service at the Crystal Cathedral, the home base for the international Crystal Cathedral Ministries, including a congregation of over 10,000 members and the internationally televised "Hour of Power." The afternoon will include three workshops on e-commerce, world trade and the future of farm policy. The workshops are open to all registered convention attendees.

Convention speakers include: Dr. Ronald Williams, vice-president, energy research and technology applications for the Public Power Institute, Tennessee Valley Authority; Claudia Svarstad, National Farmers Union Insurance Companies president. The Honorable George McGovern, former U.S. senator and ambassador to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, has also been invited to speak.

On Monday, March 3, NFU convention delegates will consider and adopt the 2003 NFU policy program. The policy positions adopted by Farmers Union members will be used to set the organization's legislative priorities in the year ahead.

Virginia Grazier Sold On Bermuda Grass

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

HARRISONBURG, Va.— Michael Phillips has something to prove. On July 27 during the Second World Feeder Bermuda Grass Field Day, some 145 persons learned what it is.

"My goal is an average year is to graze your around and not make hay," Phillips said "I'm gonna do it."

The progressive grazier didn't predict when that would happen, although he warned he's been known to "talk the ears off a stalk of corn."

Phillips invited field day participants to walk through the tender Bermuda grass without their outlet and shoes. He spoke about the benefits of this versatile grass on which he grazes a variety of livestock, including beef cows.

"The cheapest machine you can run has four legs and a fly swatter," he said.

For every person who is willing to listen and bold enough to try something new there are scores of non-believers when it comes to Bermuda grass moving north from the deep south where it is generally grown.

"Some say it's too cold here for Bermuda," Phillips said.

He reported being laughed at so much that he tries to plant where the neighbors can't see.

Phillips and his wife Susan operate a rotational grazing system diversified with 80 brood cows, 40 ewes and two poultry houses that, so far, have survived unscathed in the 2002 avian influenza outbreak.

Bit by bit, Phillips continues to kill off the fescue on his farm in order to plant more Bermuda grass. The preferred time for this is in the fall, just before the first bitter frost hits he said. He then seeds winter rye — rather than ryegrass — prior to planting Bermuda grass 'sprigs' the following year.

"I will not use ryegrass," he said "It continually wants to come back."

The Bermuda sprigs can be planted by hand or by machine for larger areas. Phillips uses a machine connected

Aged and new Bermuda grass is pictured at the World Feeder Bermuda Grass Field Day, conducted at the farm of Michael and Susan Phillips, Harrisonburg, Va.. The roots of Bermuda grass go deep into the earth to pull up moisture. Experienced growers of Bermuda can't say enough about its potential to make money for the farmer. The versatile grass is high in digestibility, protein, and tonnage; starts earlier, grows longer, and stays tender the whole year, they claim. According to growers, all breeds of livestock love it, but especially horses.

Lehigh Hay Exporter Keeps Delivering In Drought Year

From Field To Ship, The Finks Maximize Hay-Handling Efficiency

DAVE LEFEVRE
Lancaster Farming Staff

GERMANSVILLE (Lehigh Co.) — For three decades, David Fink has been a leader in innovative hay marketing.

Even through drought years like this one, the owners of his business always like to keep shipping hungry customers of high quality hay to home and dairy farms in the states and Europe. Dry weather has also increased demand for hay on the East Coast.

Fink first began compressing hay on Walnut Hollow Farm here in the mid-1970s. Even today, this enterprise is still relatively rare in our region, though more common in the northwest part of the country.

Much of the manual labor in Fink's operation has been eliminated over the years, but the principle remains the same: cured hay is compressed into super-dense packages that can be shipped as efficiently as possible.

With the help of wife Susan, sons Travis and Mike, and a staff that includes about 18 workers during harvesting season, Fink markets 5,000 tons of hay per year. About 75 percent of that is harvested from 900 acres of timothy, alfalfa, orchardgrass and mixed hay stands on the home farm and nearby rented land.

Beside minimizing freight costs, the Finks also strive to deliver a top-quality product. Walnut Hollow Farm hay, in fact, posted three first-place winners in this year's Hay Show at Ag Progress Days.

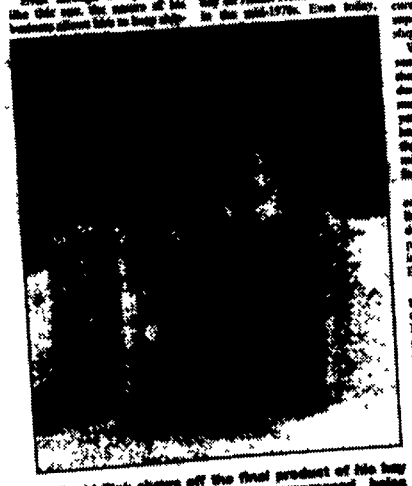
"The key to marketing hay is getting the right product to the consumer at an affordable price," Fink said. And the cost of transport can "make or break the ability to get into the market," he pointed out.

The hay processing operation on Fink's farm converts 800-pound square bales (3 x 3 x 8 feet) into compact square bales 22 inches long. Don't expect to grab one of these little bales, however, and toss it into the hay rack with the ease you would a regular small bale. Those bales have been packed together with about a million pounds of hydraulic pressure in a compressing machine. The result is a bale weighing 70-90 pounds depending on the type of hay.

The Finks harvest large quantities in a short period of time as close to the peak of production as possible. For timothy, that generally means the pre- to early flower stage, between June 10 and 20. Alfalfa harvest begins in the third week of May.

Once the season begins, we just go, Fink said. Harvest is continuous through the summer

(Turn to Page B17)



David Fink shows off the final product of his hay processing operation. These compressed bales weigh about 80 and 90 pounds, respectively. While timothy, alfalfa and grass meadows have suffered from drought, the Finks have harvested more than 5,000 tons so far this year, including an excellent crop of alfalfa in June.

David F. Fyshe
NRCS Grassland Management Specialist

I find it hard to believe that my grandchildren have gone back to school and summer is drawing to a close. My oldest grandson is playing football this year, so that makes him part of the team. Well, just like my grandson, I see myself as a part of a team. Webster defines a team as a group of people working together in a coordinated effort.

By now, you may be wondering what team I am part of. Well, I am pleased to say I am part of the Natural Resources Conservation Service's (NRCS) grazing team.

What could a grazing team do? Is it a group that is grazing as a team? The grazing team that has been put together by Robin Hoard, Pennsylvania's State Conservationist, has been charged with the job of providing technical assistance to the people of Pennsylvania to plan and install grazing systems. This team is made of up six

That's Why They Call It A Joystick.

CVT...Continuously Variable Transmission. We call it "Vario" for short. You'll just call it smart, smooth and simple to use. Not to mention efficient, effective and, yes, even enjoyable.

The Vario maximizes the legendary FENDT performance, and is available on all FENDT 400, 700 and 900 Series models. Tests have shown Vario can increase power output up to 20%, and increase working efficiency up to 10%, all the while cutting fuel consumption by up to 10%.

Vario lets the tractor put all its power to work...effortlessly. So all you have to do its sit back, control the joystick, and enjoy the ride. (Which, by the way, is easy to do...but that's another story.)

FENDT

Everybody's got a little 'ham' in them. Which is a good thing. Especially when you own a FENDT tractor. 400, 700, 900 series. It doesn't matter. Operator comfort and quiet come standard on a FENDT. And we don't mean just added cushioning and sound-deadening material.

A hydropneumatic front axle suspension system provides maximum comfort even with maximum loads. Innovative cab suspension absorbs vibration from the tractor frame while providing additional stabilizing front-to-rear. And then there's the speed-sensitive shock load stabilizing system. It automatically raises and lowers the rear hydraulics in response to forces from the hitch and front axle to compensate for the bounce.

Add all that to FENDT's Vario, the sophisticated continuously variable transmission, and you've got maximum performance, increased efficiency, better fuel consumption, and one fine ride. All you have to do is hobble on into the house every night like every muscle in your body hurts. (Hey, do it well and it might be good for an extra slice of pie.)

GEHL

YOUR LIVESTOCK IMPLEMENT LINE since 1859

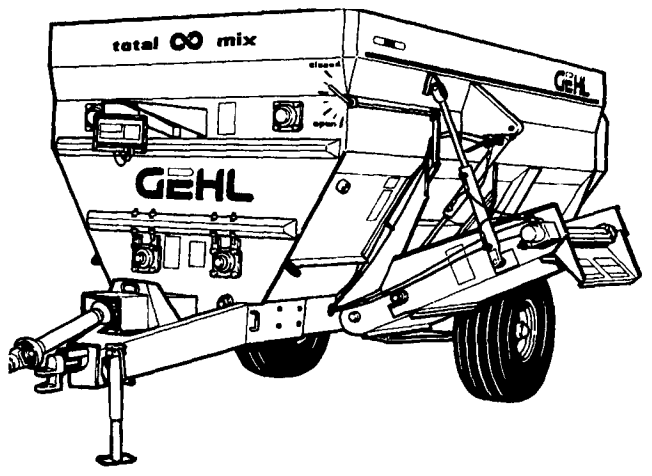
The Legacy Continues.

Gehl Forage Harvesters have been the leader in field performance, product innovation and customer value for more than 50 years. This legacy is continued with three models that are designed to meet the demands of every forage harvesting application. And with the addition of 11 configurations of forage boxes, Gehl is one of the most comprehensive suppliers of hay and forage equipment.

These heavy-duty forage boxes are constructed with corrosion-resistant aluminized steel to provide years of rugged use.

Models include: front-unload, rear-unload, combination front/rear unload models, and rear-unload "Forage Max" series with a truck-mounted version.

TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration – up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content.

- "Hay-slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horse power.
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities.

Seedway's Bailey Tops Cornell University Spring Barley Trials

HALL, N.Y.—Bailey barley from Seedway, Inc. has topped the Cornell University 2002 spring barley yield trials with an average yield of 55.7 bushels per acre over seven years.

This outstanding performance demonstrates the consistency and dependability of Bailey barley over time and across varied environments.

In addition to it's superior yield performance, Bailey barley also recorded a very good lodging rating in the trials.

Introduced in 2001, Bailey barley was named for the late Lyndon Bailey, longtime Seedway, Inc. dealer and employee.

High-Energy Forages Focus Of Meetings

KINZER (Lancaster Co.)—King's AgriSeeds hosted High Energy Forage Seminars recently with 290 attendees enjoying information packed meetings.

The meetings were conducted Feb. 16 at Loganton and Feb. 17 at Kinzer.

"Our goal was to inform dairy farmers and the dairy industry that there are many exciting forage products on the market that can help farmers increase their profitability."

Lyn Crabtree, a nutritionist from Illinois, gave an example of how high energy forages saved one farmer with 85 cows $27,302 in one year. Part of the producer's goal was to reduce ration costs but at the same time maintain cow productivity and possibly increase cow health.

A 24,000 pound herd average was being maintained, but increased profitability was important to help bring a son into the business. Milk production was trending upward and herd health was also excellent.

The ration with high energy forages saved the farmer 88 cents per cow per day, just by growing improved forages. Crabtree pointed out that farmers need to adopt these new forage genetics and their management to get the "wood" out of their rations. Energy is the limiting factor for balancing rations and too much grain is hard on the milking herd.

Don Schwartz, extension agent from Washington County, Maryland, spoke on double-cropping annual and Italian ryegrasses with corn for silage and BMR sorghum sudangrass. In his area, farmers are getting three or more tons of dry matter of super quality forage from the ryegrass, plus getting a great crop of either corn silage or sorghum sudangrass. The ryegrass requires high nitrogen inputs and removes a high rate of phosphorus. Put it in combination with corn or sorghum sudangrass, and it is an excellent system for farms that are pushing nutrient management requirements. For farmers wanting more information on managing annual and Italian ryegrass, Don Schwartz and Stan Fultz from University of Maryland have developed a fact sheet. Balage, trench silos, and grazing are the preferred harvest systems for ryegrass.

Tim Fritz said, "for farmers running short of corn silage, it was suggested for those who have annual or Italian ryegrass already seeded last fall to take three cuttings this spring (approximately April 20, May 10, and May 25), and then to double-crop BMR sorghum sudangrass on a postion of their acreage. This combination will give quick high quality forage instead of waiting 100 plus days for a corn silage crop."

John Rucker from Master Choice spoke about his MC-615 and MC-520Q corn that makes super corn silage. These two hybrids have very high sugar, low lignin, and excellent digestibility all with excellent standability.

Also featured on the program was Dr. Bob Fry, DVM, a practicing veterinarian and dairy owner, who spoke about his high production grazing system on the eastern shore of Maryland.

Other speakers included Tim Fritz, King's AgriSeeds agronomist, who spoke on King's AgriSeeds alfalfa varieties and Endura Kura Clover. Tim Guttridge from Barenbrug USA spoke on forage management and how it effects productivity.

Mycogen Seeds Announces 17 New Grain Corn Hybrids

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Mycogen Seeds recently announced the commercial advancement of 17 new grain corn hybrids. Thirteen of the new hybrids will be available for planting in 2003, while the remaining four hybrids will be available for test plots in 2003 and planting in 2004. The new hybrids range in maturity from 81 to 117 days.

"This announcement carries on our strong tradition of excellence in new product development and our emphasis on keeping our new product pipeline full," says Steven Smith, grain corn marketing specialist with Mycogen Seeds. "In 2002, Mycogen Seeds has introduced 37 grain corn hybrids, 16 soybean varieties, nine silage hybrids and three sunflower hybrids to better serve its growers' changing needs."

The newly commercialized hybrids offer a variety of genetics to suit the diverse agronomic challenges of corn growers throughout the Corn Belt. Traits include Roundup Ready®, YieldGard®, and Clearfield™ technologies.

In addition, five of the hybrids are available with Gaucho® seed-applied insecticide, which protects germinating seed from damage and stand loss caused by wireworms, seedcorn maggots and other secondary pests.

"We're pleased by the success these new hybrids have exhibited throughout the development process," says Jim Radtke, director of research with Mycogen Seeds. "Mycogen Seeds' leading trait technology, and research and development continue to show great promise. Our new product development process continues to deliver products that benefit our growers

CNH Realigns Agricultural Business Into 3 Units

LAKE FOREST, Ill.—CNH Global N.V. (NYSE:CNH) recently announced a reorganization of its global agricultural equipment business into three regional units, a change designed to provide the company with increased flexibility and an enhanced ability to quickly respond to regional market and customer requirements.

The realignment of CNH's agricultural equipment operations, effective January 1, 2003, gives increased manufacturing, marketing and financial decision-making responsibilities to each of the three new regional units. Each unit also will be charged with further building and maintaining customer and dealer relationships within the region.

"The centralized approach in place since the merger of Case and New Holland provided CNH with the momentum needed to achieve its integration goals," said Paolo Monferino, CNH president and chief executive officer. "By further enhancing our customer- and market-focused approach, we are moving operations 'closer' to the customer, enabling us to better respond to their needs and take advantage of every opportunity for future growth."

In the new organization, the design and development of new products, along with industrial governance, will continue to be managed globally. Strategic marketing and brand governance, as well as agricultural supply chain management, also will remain global functions.

Working directly with Monferino, William T. (Tom) Kennedy will lead the transition process, including implementation of the key processes governing the relationships between the central functions and the regions.

Luciano Paiola, who has led CNH's agricultural tractor engineering and manufacturing operations, will assume responsibility for global product development and industrial governance.

Bernard Melard will be responsible for strategic marketing and brand governance and Herbert Wolf will continue to lead the agricultural equipment supply chain management process.

What's against soft paint?

In metal roofing and siding some manufacturers use soft pliable paint to prevent cracks. The disadvantage with softer paint is that it scratches so easy. Handling during erection, flying debris during storms, children playing against it, etc. can easily scratch softer paint. Scratches on softer paints tend to rust prematurely. Everlast heat forms to prevent this. Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased."

Grow Healthy Calves On Wen-Crest Farms

Scott and Robin Balsbaugh are pleased with calf performance on non-medicated Purina Nurse Chow, ready-mixed with Calf Insure to promote health and growth. Purina representative Duane Nolt, right, helps measure this thriving example in the Wen-Crest Farms calf facility.

For Scott and Robin Balsbaugh, tending dairy calves is a big part of the workday. During the past 15 years.

At any given time, they are responsible for raising about 200 calves under four months of age on Wen-Crest Farms, a heifer-raising operation near Schaefferstown owned by Steve Wenger & Family. Twice a week, a new batch of calves from three nearby dairy farms are brought under the Balsbaugh's care.

They depend on Purina products and service to make the most of this critical stage in the dairy animals' life.

The setup for pre-weaned calves allows plenty of fresh air year-round, access to sunlight, and individualized attention.

After starting out with colostrum at the dairy farm, calves at the Balsbaugh's begin on Nurse Chow with Calf Insure, a ready-made combination recently made available by Purina. This non-medicated products combine Purina's traditional Nurse Chow milk replacer with direct-fed microbials, special yeast cell sugars, and vitamins. These stimulate calves' appetites, help prevent scours and boost immune function.

Scott said he has been impressed with the calves' ability to eat and grow on the Calf Insure.

"It really does make a difference in their appetite," he said.

The starter feed is Purina Calf Startena with 18 percent protein. It is fed free choice after the first week. The reason is simple. In side-by-side trials Scott did on the farm, he said calves began eating the Startena sooner before other brands of calf starters.

Beside providing quality feed for calves, Purina also offers comprehensive calf-raising expertise, including frequent walk-throughs, trouble-shooting, measuring calf growth, making recommendations, and complimenting growers on what they're doing right.

Duane Nolt of K&K Feeds, Richland, said that local Purina representatives like himself and Becky May, recently hired Purina calf specialist for the Northeast, are always ready to help.
